DIRECT ELECTION VICTORY

By the big vote of 196 to 35, the Massachusetts House of Representatives today adopted a resolution requesting Congress to call a constitutional convention to provide for the direct election of United States Senators by the people.

The order was introduced by Frank A. Denahue of Boston. The resolution was favorably reported by the Committee on Federal Relations and today came up for a vote in the House.

The matter goes to the Senate, where a majority vote is needed to pass it.

Representative Haigis in closing for the direct election of Senators said in part:

"A change in the method of electing United States Senators is desirable for several reasons. The most important one is that it would make the Senate responsible to the people. Popular election of Senators would demand that the Senators thus elected command public confidence; it would lessen the influence of wealth upon the Senate. It would tend to divorce national from State politics. It would promote the nomination and election of members of the Legislature upon the simple issue of their fitness for such service; it would leave legislatures free to do their normal work.

"It would insure the States being represented in the Senate by obtaining such deadlocks as the one which recently tied up the Legislature of the great State of New York for two weeks and which now exist in the States of Colorado and Nebraska and which have left those two States for one representative in the Senate each in the extraordinary session of Congress.

"The present method of electing has resulted in the selection of three distinct classes of undesirable and non-representative Senators—State bosses, such as Platt, Quay, Penrose, Clark, Hale, Hoar and Aldrich; machine politicians, such as Latimer, Depew and Foraker, and men like Clark of Montana and Lippitt and Wetmore of Rhode Island, whose only distinction is great wealth."

PRICES GIVEN ON ALDERMEN

A book containing the names of members of the Board of Aldermen of Lawrence, with their prices for political support when opposite, is in the possession of Phil Holland, a Lawrence contractor, according to evidence introduced to-day in the Supreme Court.

The testimony was given by Frederick L. Snow. He swore that Holland showed him the book, indicated the figures that were marked what it was going to cost him to elect John P. Kane city treasurer.

The testimony caused a sensation in the courtroom. It was given during a hearing on a petition for a writ of mandamus brought by a minority of the Lawrence City Council to compel the Board of Aldermen to meet in joint convention to elect a city treasurer. After a lengthy hearing the writ was denied by Judge Loring.

Snow testified that he was the owner of a quarry and that he furnished paving blocks to Holland.

Holland took the stand and denied all that Snow had testified. Kane testified that he had sent a letter to the city government the last of February, withdrawing his name as a candidate for the office of city treasurer, and that he does not intend to allow his name to be used again.

Patrolman Anonymous dropped in upon the Boston AMERICAN by mail yesterday, beat me up with the Corruption of Honesty and Manliness, bound me over in humiliation, and fined us twenty-five dollars. From which there shall be no appeal.

Readers of the AMERICAN will recall the facts. We had sent out hundreds of "return" postal cards to the patrolmen of the Boston Police Department, asking them who, in their opinion, would be the best man to succeed Commissioner O'Meara. Mr. O'Meara retires on June 5, at the expiration of a five-day leave.

Hundreds of policemen responded to our canvass. Many of the replies were well written. All were phrased in decency and politeness save one. This was the reply of our friend Patrolman Anonymous. One of his reasons for favoring the re-appointment of Commissioner O'Meara, Anonymous told us, was that the present Commissioner tells the truth, which, Anonymous observed, is "more than the AMERICAN does." Our own opinion is that it is more than anybody does.

Far more interesting than what Patrolman Anonymous said about the newspaper, however, was his challenge. "I'll give $5 to charity if the AMERICAN prints this answer."

Of course we printed the answer, although many better answers had to be laid aside for lack of room. At the same time we called upon Patrolman Anonymous to send along the $5, assuring him that it would be given to the charity designated by him and that due acknowledgment would be made in these columns.

We didn't hear from Patrolman Anonymous on Monday.

We didn't hear from him on Tuesday.

On Wednesday, our readers will remember, we called upon the Copper to make good. Nothing doing.

Yesterday we lost our temper, an unpardonable offence in newspapers as well as in policemen. Newspapers and policemen should always preserve the judicial attitude, whether judges do or not. We said some mighty sharp things about Patrolman Anonymous, believing we were justified by his insult, his challenge and his apparent watching.

Imagine our editorial humiliation, share in our pride in the personnel of the Boston police department, when last night at afternoon we opened a letter and read thus:

April 13, 1911.

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I despise an anonymous writer. You were the cause of me writing the first when you requested me to answer your postal. In my second I told you that I had given $5 to charity as I said. I did not say that I would give it to you to give. However, as you do not think that I have done so, I will endorse $5 to be given to Consumptive Home on Quincy street, Dorchester.

You said that I was offensive in my answer. But, believe me, I had no intentions of being so and wish to apologize for any offensive words. I have always tried to be manly in all my dealings with my fellow man, and it is foolish for a $23 a week man to get into an argument with a $1,000 a week man.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have a special favor to ask, which is that you forward the money. Do not say where it came from and do not say anything about it in your paper, as I am very sorry for my last answers which was not intentional. Yours respectfully,

POLICE OFFICER.

We have not yet received the "second" referred to by Patrolman Anonymous, but we do not doubt that he sent it. We take off our hat to him, apologizing, in our turn, for all the "darn things" we said yesterday. We do not know who he is. Perhaps we shall never know, although we should like to. He may rest assured that we shall never attempt to pierce his anonymity.

The point is that Patrolman Anonymous was not obliged to come across with his five dollars. He might have kept it forever. We might have continued for a day or two to tell everybody what we thought of the unknown policeman, but if he was that kind of a man he would have been laughing at us.

Patrolman Anonymous has made good. We congratulate him. He has displayed a high degree of manhood and generosity. On that we congratulate the people of Boston and the Boston Police Department.

We said yesterday, before our friend's letter had come along, that we would pay twenty-five dollars to the charity designated by the writer of the best opinion of Patrolman Anonymous and his course with reference to the promised five dollars.

That offer is hereby withdrawn. As you will see by the fac similes printed herewith we have paid the patrolman's five dollars to the Consumptives' Home on Quincy street, Dorchester, and with it twenty-five dollars that was to have gone to somebody for saying "nat things" about the officer.

It strikes us, after all, that our canvass of the Boston Police Department on the subject of commissionership has not been unsuccessful. It was our purpose to help the Governor in making a selection. We think we have done so. We have found a candidate. He is an honest man, a policeman of experience and almost an good a letter-writer as the present incumbent.

For Police Commissioner of Boston, we nominate Patrolman Anonymous.

DENMAN THOMPSON IS DEAD

Denman Thompson, the Elmira actor who played the leading role in "Old Homestead" for many years, died to-day at his country home at Swanzey, N. H., aged seventy-seven.

The death of the venerable actor was expected, as he had been ill for a month or so with a trouble from which the doctors said he could not recover. The illness was of an uraemic nature.

Mr. Thompson's condition became extremely critical about ten days ago, but he rallied and for a time there was hope that he might remain strength enough to live for some time yet.

A relapse came yesterday and the noted actor gradually sank until he fell into his final slumber.

Funeral on Sunday.

The funeral will be held on Sunday at 2:30 o'clock. A special train at Keene will meet all Boston and other trains, and leave at 2 o'clock for West Swanzey. After the funeral this train will leave West Swanzey in time to connect passengers with other trains for their destinations Sunday night.

Present at the time of Mr. Thompson's death were Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Thompson, his son and daughter-in-law; Mrs. A. Kilpatrick, Miss V. MacFarland, and Dr. Cyrel Hepler, of Boston.

Mr. Thompson's company, now playing in Providence, will close in time to attend the funeral.

Mr. Thompson would have been seventy-eight years old if he had lived until the 18th of October. He was born in Girard, Erie County, Pa. His parents settled early in Beechwood, the son of a poor farmer. The first fourteen years of his home life were spent in a log cabin. From the Thompson family moved to Swanzey, N. H. The future of West Swanzey is about six miles below Keene.

Famous in "Old Homestead."

Where or when he set out to be Boston in search of employment, and soon after joined Lyceum circuses as a property boy and "roustabout," is following. Whether he made the first stage appearance as a "super" under Charlotte Cushman, who was playing Lady Macbeth at the Howard Athenaeum, Lowell, or later, in Buffalo, he had the first speaking part, and following this he went about the country playing Irish and negro characters.

While traveling Thompson was taken ill with rheumatism, and as he lay in bed in Pittsburg he thought out a sketch called "Josiah Whitcomb," which later developed into "The Old Homestead" and made him famous. "Josiah Whitcomb" was only about twenty minutes long and was first produced in Pittsburg in February, 1875. The sketch was an immediate success, and during the following year, while playing in Chicago, it was lengthened to three acts.

Wrote "Paradise Alley."

As the Boston Theatre, in 1886, "The Old Homestead" was first produced and it has remained a national institution ever since. Until a few years ago Mr. Thompson traveled constantly with the company, but as the years crept on Chester were compelled to remain in Chester more and more, leaving the Winter of 1910 he created a sensation by wedding a Boston actress, Miss Isabel Waldron, who had been playing in the original "Josiah Whitcomb," which he played to perfection for two months. Later came the old fascination of the footlights, and the strongest item in the opening bill of the season so started out with his old Homestead company, playing in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, and planning to close the season with a visit to Boston. But Fleeting time and failing health forced him to abandon the idea.

In addition to "Josiah Whitcomb" and the "Old Homestead," Mr. Thompson wrote, in conjunction with George W. Ryder, the play of Paradise Alley, which had a successful run, and which Mr. Thompson presented to Mr. Ryder.

PEACE IS EXPECTED IN THE SHOE STRIKE

Negotiations looking toward the early settlement of the fourteen-day stitchers' strike at the Head street plant of the A. G. Walton shoe company in Chelsea were instated by the Lasters' and the Edgemakers' unions to-day, and a conference arranged between the striking stitchers and the company this morning. This following the first recognition of the stitchers' union by the firm, although its lasters and edgemakers are all union operatives, two hundred operatives in the lasting and bottoming departments of the shop were laid off this morning for lack of work.

$2,000 JEWEL HUNT ASKED BY LONDON

Deputy Superintendent Watts to-day received a commendation from Scotland Yard, London, asking him to be on the lookout for $2,000 worth of jewels which were stolen from Major Nugent in India on Friday, July 7, 1910, and which the English police believe are being brought to Boston. The jewels were diamonds and rubies. Watts will notify the newsboys to be on the lookout for the jewels.

SHAWMUT BANK YEGGS GET $.50

Much excitement was caused to-day in the National Saxonia Bank building at Devonshire and Water streets when two rough looking characters went into the bank and after lurking around for half an hour demanded to see President William A. Gaston.

Not being able to see Colonel Gaston, they walked up to the second floor and went into the office of Arthur Millman, cashier of Pulte, Webber & Company, stock and bankers. One of the men pulling his hand in his hip pocket in a suspicious manner, demanded money.

Millman gave them fifty cents and they hurried from the building. Then Police Headquarters was called and three inspectors were sent out in search of the yeggs.

Get 50 Cents from Gaston.

When the two men first approached one of them went to the office boy.

"My name is Gaston. I belong in Weymouth. I have just got out of Sing Sing, where I did seven years. Let Millman think I went to see him."

The boy went into the Gaston business room and told him what the men said.

"Tell them that I don't know Millman, and therefore told the boy. He did so and they went away without making any more trouble.

The men and companions were doing the bank on the second floor. The office door of Pulte, Webber & Co. office, which overlooks the second floor. The office door is locked. Millman was open. One man alone. The men walked in without the formality of asking leave.

"I want some money," said one of the men, at the same time pulling a gun toward his hip pocket, as though he were about to pull a revolver. Then the man looked. "I used to be a cracksman myself."

Millman thought the best way out of the trouble at that moment was to acquaint them with half a dollar, it sounded. It worked.

Headquarters Notified.

By this time curious began to filter through the big building that there were couple of bank robbers around. The corridors were filled with the curious, and some one telephoned to police headquarters. Police Inspectors Harris, Farrell and Angel were sent out to look for the two men.

After they got the fifty cents they disappeared. It was the impression of Mr. Millman that they had been drinking. Both of the men were about forty years of age, one had a light moustache. The other man was dark and short.

The office boy in the Shawmut Bank told that the two men had been around daily half an hour before they asked for Colonel Gaston.

ILL-WIND BLEW $20 TO A MALDEN YOUTH

Seventeen-year-old John Lewis of Malden to-day $20 richer, thanks to the gentle breeze that lifted his hat off his curly black head and deposited it in the gutter at Florence and Pleasant streets, Malden, where the lad saw something glisten in the sunlight. He picked it up and took it home. Yesterday when starting for work he saw on a post a notice that read: "Found, $20 with gold piece set with platinum diamonds, lost by Mrs. Jennie Jones, No. 157 Summer street, Malden." Back home he travelled. He counted the money and saw that they agreed with the number on the notice. He called up Mrs. Jones and the lady was presented with two ten dollar gold pieces. The pin was valued at $800.

BUENOS AYRES, Argentine, April 14.—Ten bodies have so far been recovered from the wreckage in the wake of yesterday's hurricane. Many were drowned in a tidal wave which rolled in during the storm. Fifty persons are reported missing, having been overwhelmed while fishing in the estuaries.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., April 14.—Jack Carlson of New York and Lillian Smith agreed to die together on April 4. He swallowed ten grains of mercury tablets and she one. She has recovered. He died during the night at St. Vincent's Hospital.

AFFIDAVITS IN WILL CASE PAID FOR, ALLEGED

Lawyer Choate Makes Statement in Argument for a Change of Venue.

That John B. Moran paid for affidavits given in evidence to show that jurors were bribed to break the will of Uriel H. Crocker, the Boston millionaire, was one of the startling declarations made by Charles F. Choate, Jr., to-day before Judge Stevens in the Superior Criminal Court at the hearing on the motion of his client, George L. Crocker, that his trial on the charge of bribery be held outside of Suffolk County.

Mr. Crocker declares that on account of "local prejudice and political prejudice" against him it will be impossible to find twelve unbiased men to hear his case. Mr. Choate also declared that that of the three Crockers, the former city treasurer and member of the rent Finance Commission, was indicted, a fairer political lead had been declared.

He got one of those reformers (Crocker) and we came within one vote of getting another," meaning John A. Sullivan, said Mr. Choate.

Under Bribery Charge.

Crocker, with John J. Conroy and Charles H. Lovell, is under indictment charged with conspiring to bribe William J. Kulik, a juror at the Crocker will trial, and Crocker and Conroy are also charged on a separate indictment with aiding William Hartnett, who confessed to bribing Kulik with $500. Hartnett will be one of the principal witnesses at the trial of Crocker and the two other men.

The hearing to-day before Judge Stevens in the Superior Criminal Court was on the question of granting a motion made by counsel for Crocker that the trial be held outside counties on the ground that a fair jury could not be had in Suffolk County on account of "local, religious and political prejudice." The motion is being opposed by District Attorney Pelletier and Assistant District Attorney Loesch.

Calls Up Moran Affidavits.

Startling statements were made by Mr. Choate in his opening address to-day on behalf of Mr. Crocker. He declared that the late John B. Moran had bought and paid for affidavits setting forth that there had been bribery in the Crocker will trial. Mr. Choate said he would offer proof of this charge.

Mr. Crocker's work as a member of the Rent Commission, Mr. Choate said, aroused Mr. Choate as well as Mr. Crocker's ardent part in the Republican-Moulton municipal campaign on the Storrow side of the Charles River basin.

Mr. Crocker was indicted two months after the city election. After an was in jail he got out on bail. Mr. Choate said he got one of those reformers, and we came within one vote of getting another," meaning John A. Sullivan."

Mr. Choate in his argument to-day to prove his contention that the publicity given the case before the Grand Jury for eight years has prejudiced the mind of the public and made a fair trial impossible.

Cites Moran Charges.

"The defendant, Crocker, was city treasurer of Boston in the Fall of 1909, when the dispute over the will of his father was brought to a climax. Crocker claimed there was a trial over allowing the will on the ground that it was obtained under the undue influence of the widow; the second Mrs. Crocker. This resulted in a disagreement and a second trial was held. The will was held valid in the Fall of 1910, a decree was entered.

"Then John B. Moran was running for District Attorney of Suffolk County and on the strength he repeatedly charged that Mr. Crocker, when Hugh Bond was the district attorney, had bribed the office. Moran declared that he had in his possession affidavits showing that bribery had been committed in the Crocker will trial.

"We will show that these affidavits were obtained by him in consideration of certain sums of money. We know this, and we will produce our evidence to convince this court. Mr. Moran declared that if after he had been elected district attorney he had not indicted some person or persons for bribery in this case he would resign. We will show by the testimony of the public mind all this caused.

Gives Circulation Figures

"All of Mr. Moran's charges were set forth in the newspapers at great length—in the AMERICAN, with its circulation of 250,000 each week, in the Post with its 300,000 circulation, and in the other Boston papers.

Mr. Moran was elected. Unfortunately for Mr. Crocker, one of those newspapers continued after Mr. Moran's election to publish the charges made by him. Mr. Moran very properly kept his pledge to do something in connection with the Crocker will case. Then there were large headlines in this paper and long stories about the case, especially when Mr. Crocker's bondsmen had gone by.

"All this made a lasting impression on the public mind that Mr. Crocker will come somebody had done some bribing and someone had accepted a bribe. With excellent newspaper judgment, the newspapers continued to print

LYNN ARGUES FOR "L" CHANGE

A delegation of Lynn citizens to-day argued before the committee on Railroads at the State House in Boston & Maine change its plans for elevating its tracks through that city. The railroad has already started a four-track elevated structure from the Lynn line to Central Square, but when the elevated structure will cross Broadway it will have only two tracks instead of four. The object of the change is to enable the Lynn people to make the change without increasing the extra cost by the city of Lynn. It is said the change would cost $4,000,000.

Besides A. Johnson Charles O. Bland and others signed that the elevated structure would depreciate the value of their property. They claimed that $25,000 would be saved in the square, and that depreciation would mean that the small taxpayer would eventually have to pay it.

SECRETARY OF STATE OLIN NEAR DEATH

At 12:30 p. m. it was reported that Secretary of State William M. Olin was very low, his condition being unchanged since early morning.

Colonel Olin is ill with double pneumonia in the home of his son-in-law, Frederick Kelley, at 10 Bowdoin square, and the report issued at the square, and that depreciation would mean that the small taxpayer would eventually have to pay it.

CONTEST EDITOR HAS BIG 'SCOOP'

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

WHEEL McDERMUTT

Scoop!

Every newspaper prizes a "scoop" more than almost anything else. A "scoop" is a story which the reporter must get—foolishly it is a thing for his paper and reflects credit on the man himself.

Well, the Contest Editor has a scoop framed up and he is going to publish it next Monday, April 16. It will be exclusive, you bet. It will be of tremendous interest. It will come in the form of an announcement to all candidates and their friends in the AMERICAN'S great $55,000 Prize Contest.

Now there is no use in anyone trying to "scoop around," as they say, and find out what the Contest Editor's scoop is going to be. Nobody knows but the Contest Editor himself and he won't tell—not till next Sunday. Then you will all know.

Every candidate and every friend of every candidate needs to get the Sunday AMERICAN next Sunday to find out what the big scoop is. It is sure a big thing for the Contest Editor is fairly gloating over it all by his lonesome. It's a shame, to tease the candidates and others, but telling it now. But next Sunday will be appointed time.

One of the brightest, smartest candidates in this big contest lives in the famous Dorchester section of Lynn. This is Miss Janet Two. The candidate is a school chum of Daniel McDermott. Daniel is also in this contest to win. When it comes you will find me right there and you needn't look for me at the bottom, either—he's the way they talk at High Rock.

CHILDREN CLEAN ALL NORWOOD

Norwood today is the cleanest spot on the New England map, thanks to the effort of 400 school children. They spent an entire day in the streets of the town, cleaning away scraps of paper and even handling shovels. Wagon loads of refuse were removed. The result is worth seeing.

Eleven teachers marshalled the youngsters, who ranged in ages from four to twelve years.

Criticism in some portions of the town over the action of Superintendent of Schools Austin Fitts in granting the day to the pupils was swept aside by a wave of approval when the squads of children were seen, carrying their nail-pointed sticks to pick up refuse, and, at evening, when the great piles of refuse and the freshly turned earth where other debris had been buried were noted.

Behind the move is an additional motive beyond teaching Norwood's children constructively the value of cleanliness in all things. On account of the low rate it has heretofore been impossible to get a street cleaning department of any kind, so that the conditions have been aggravated.

The novel scheme represents perhaps the culmination of "clean-up" work which has been inaugurated and fostered by Miss Katherine Carlee, principal of the Winslow and Balch schools in the south end of the town, whose pupils comprise the squad.

Of widely varying nationalities, and with parents for the most part of the poorer class, Miss Carlee early found that her work in the schools was largely hampered by uncleanliness.

A definite scheme was therefore supposed out, by which all the teachers had plans for inculcating principles of cleanliness in their youthful charges.

Personal cleanliness came first in the category. The child was taught not only to keep its hands clean, but the advantages of clean clothes and bathing were taught.

Then came cleanliness of the home, and it has been the working principle of all the teachers to strive to have the pupil take home suggestions for improving conditions there.

Cleanliness of the yard and street, of out-of-doors in general, increased healthfulness, has come as a climax, and Clean-Up Day yesterday was the crowning effort at educating the child along this particular line.

His Landlady's Advice Probably Saved His Life

I feel that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root saved my life. I inherited weak kidneys. Very often my urine was bloody and the discharge so frequent and painful that I would have to stay in bed to obtain temporary relief. I consulted good physicians, but the results were disappointing. My landlady advised me to try Swamp-Root as the last resort, which I did and I was quickly relieved.

I continued taking Swamp-Root and my weight has increased fifty pounds. My health is of the best and I have told many others about Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and have done a lot of good in this way. Your wonderful medicine is of great value to mankind.

Yours very truly,
J. H. BRUNDY,

NEW CHARGES IN CROCKER CASE

much about the Crocker will case, and the struggle of the young widow against the three brothers and their family connections, and it was set forth with picturesque detail.

Juror Found Guilty.

"In December, 1906, the jurors in the Crocker will trial were indicted charged with accepting bribes. Marshall Kilduff was found guilty. John J. Cronin was acquitted. In view of this the widow filed a petition with the Supreme Court asking that the will now be set aside.

Mr. Choate next took up Mr. Crocker's connection as a member of the Finance Commission, and declared that his efforts to cut payrolls and put an end to graft in the city government resulted in wholesale dismissals in all departments and indictments of many persons and officials.

"This stirred up a great animosity toward the members of the commission," declared Mr. Choate. "Two years after the city election Mr. Crocker took an active part on one side and two months after the election these indictments were returned. After they were returned a political leader in Boston declared: 'We got one of those reformers, and we came within one vote of getting another,' meaning John A. Sullivan. Now, Mr. Sullivan knew nothing about and had had nothing to do with the Crocker will case."

Crocker in Court Room.

Though Mr. Crocker himself was present in the court room to-day, Mr. Choate next read an affidavit by him in which Mr. Crocker set forth the facts in his life, of his father's second marriage on April 28, 1892, to Annie J. Fitzpatrick, thirty-two years old, while Uriel H. Crocker was sixty years old. He made his will in 1900, leaving his entire estate worth $700,000 to his second wife, cutting off three sons with nothing. He died in 1902.

Mr. Choate next introduced bound files of all of the Boston newspapers, showing the publicity which was given to affairs of the Crocker family at this time in connection with the elder Crocker's second marriage, his death and the fight to break his will.

THIS IS LITTLE MISS M'NAMARA, 14, WHO ELOPED

MARGARET McNAMARA

Posed specially for the AMERICAN

14-YEAR-OLD ELOPERS HOME

Louis A. Richardson and Margaret McNamara, the fourteen-year-old "sweethearts" who eloped to Manchester yesterday, only to be held by the police until their parents came for them, are back in their homes in the South End under the watchful eyes of their parents. The couple whose dream of love was so rudely shattered by the unromantic police of Manchester, live within two doors of each other on Bennett street in the South End. They have been sweethearts for a long time. A month ago they quarrelled. Yesterday they met at a moving picture show.

Louis had been punished at home. He confided in his sweetheart, and they made up and decided to run away. Margaret had $2. Louis said he had nothing. With the $8 they started for Keene, where Margaret has a married sister.

Janitor Told Policeman.

They started so late that they could get no farther than Manchester. When they got off the train Louis asked the janitor at the station about hotels. The janitor told a policeman and the young pair was taken to the station.

Margaret told this story to a reporter to-day:

"Louis and I were mad with each other. Yesterday I saw him at the moving picture show. I wasn't going to speak to him at first but when he spoke to me I did. Then he told me that they had whipped him at home. He said his mother had driven him out because he smashed a lot of dishes. He told me he was going to run away. I said, 'Let's go together.' Then we made up.

"Then I said, 'I'll tell you what we'll do, Louis, we'll go to Keene and live with my sister up there. You can work on the farm.'

Louis Held Out 73 Cents.

"Louis said he didn't have any money. I said, 'Never mind, I've got $2 and that's enough for both of us.' Up at Manchester I found out that he had 73 cents that he didn't tell me about.

"I cried when they put us in police cells. But Louis never told me about that 73 cents. I found it out myself."

GOV. DIX, LIKE MARY, HAS A LITTLE LAMB

ALBANY, N. Y., April 14.—Governor Dix—like Mary—has a little lamb. So has John A. Mason, the Governor's secretary. An expressman sauntered into the executive chamber and told Mr. Mason he had packages for the Governor and his secretary. He hesitated about bringing them up, he said, because "They were alive." Then he explained that he had two boxes, each containing a lamb, one consigned to the Governor and the other to Mr. Mason. The secretary investigated and learned that the lambs were forwarded by Louis Grosse of Newburg, a friend, but no explanation accompanied them.

PICKED LOCK ALSO POCKETS

If it takes nine men to make up a ball team, how many persons does it take to open a door? Idle fables are propounded by a policeman in the Court Square police station early today, when Louis Pondexter of No. 58 Porter street and Mary Powell of No. 8 Emerald street, South End, were being booked charged with the larceny of a gold watch and chain and $1.50 from John Channing, a lawyer at No. 84 Pemberton square.

The girls were overtaken on Bromfield street after a chase by Special Officers Miner and Potter. Channing told the police he was about to enter the building at No. 84 Pemberton square, where his office is located, when the key became stuck in the door. He was having some trouble opening the door when Louis and May came along and volunteered to help him. He readily accepted their aid, and while one was picking the lock the other, he told the police, picked his pockets.

'KISS OF DEATH" BILL IS GIVEN A HEARING

PROVIDENCE, April 14.—The bill to abolish the so-called "kiss of death" by preventing the use of the mouth in threading shuttles used in textile mills, was the subject of a hearing before the Senate committee on Judiciary.

NEW SITE FOR IMMIGRANTS

The East Boston Land Company has finally secured from the Federal government the land selected by it at Jeffries Point for a new immigration station. And the East Boston Land Company has got $30,000 besides. It was announced at the Federal building to-day that the government had taken a new site for the station in East Boston near Chariestown, that it had deeded the old site to the land company and paid it $30,000. The negotiations were made for the government by Assistant District Attorney E. Mark Sullivan. The next move will be for him to take the necessary steps to have the State relinquish its jurisdiction in the new piece of land to the Federal government.

DARING BURGLARY IN DORCHESTER HOME

Telephone wires were cut, furniture overturned and clothing valued at $500 removed from closets by thieves at the home of Joseph F. Bassity, an attorney, at No. 11 Merrill street, Dorchester. The matter was reported to the police of the Upham Corner station to-day. The thieves got into the house through a rear door by means of false keys.

'L' GIRLS MUST WEAR BADGES

The 100 young women who serve as ticket sellers in the booths in the subway and tunnel stations of the Boston Elevated have just put on a new decoration prescribed by the company. It is an oval badge of white celluloid about two inches long and one and one-half inches across, bearing the words "Collector Boston Elevated."

The young women are obliged to pay fifty cents each for the badges.

Thirteen of the girls have been in the employ of the company more than five years. These have been honored with special badges, bordered with light blue and bearing also a stripe of the same color running diagonally across the front.

The badges were first issued Saturday, but only a few girls complied with the order. Monday the girls were all called to the office of the superintendent and were told that the order and the design came from Johnny Bancroft.

WIFE'S STORY BARES VICE TRADE O'MEARA SAYS HE CANNOT STOP

A simply told story of a husband's utter depravity, narrated in low, shamed tones by a girl wife on the witness stand stirred judge, jury, court officers, attorneys and spectators in the Superior Criminal Court, when Mrs. Mary Thompson, not quite eighteen years old and handsome, testified that her husband, Thomas Thompson, took her on their wedding night to an immoral resort where she was held a prisoner until she managed to escape.

"My husband wanted to be a millionaire and thought I could make him one," she said.

Thompson is being tried on an indictment, one count of which charges him with aiding and abetting in the detention of his girl wife in an improper place, the other charging him with having derived support from her earnings in the resort.

Story Stuns Court.

Hazel Niles, who was indicted with him on a charge of having detained Mrs. Thompson, is out on $1,000 cash bail. She was not in court.

Mrs. Thompson's story was a graphic one and moved everyone in the court room. Thompson, who had assumed an attitude of indifference in the dock, soon was the target for looks of such utter scorn and contempt from every man in the court room that quickly penetrated his assumption of indifference and he moved uneasily in his chair, his eyes fastened on the floor, after they had roved about the room and met with no sympathy, not even that that mankind gives to a mangy dog.

The ways and means of the traffic in women as practiced in Boston, and which Police Commissioner O'Meara has officially admitted his inability to break up, were bared by Mrs. Thompson's pathetic story.

"I was married to this man on May 15, 1910," she testified. "I had met him only a month before, but he appeared to be a decent sort of a man. The marriage ceremony was performed in St. Peter's Church, Dorchester.

"That very night he took me to a house at No. 4 Wellington street, kept by Hazel Niles. I was taken to a room and kept there. My coat was taken from me and locked in a closet, to which the Niles woman had the key. I was given other clothes, but nothing in which I dared to appear on the street. My husband told me to do as I was told and that I could make him a rich man. He threatened to beat me if I did not do as I was told by him and the Niles woman. Hazel Niles took all the money I made at her house and divided it with my husband. I did not have five cents to spend while I was there. There was no chance for me to escape. I even asked some of the men to leave the door open so I might run away.

Makes Her Escape.

"Hazel Niles said I could not go until I had paid her $100 which she had spent to buy the clothes I wore at the house. I appealed to my husband, but he said Hazel Niles was a friend of his and I would have to stay, for he would not do Hazel a dirty trick. They locked my street clothes in a closet and Hazel Niles kept the key. My husband knew that my clothes were there. He was at the house continually with a man named Walsh, but on June 25 they went out of a side room, leaving me alone with Hazel Niles. I grabbed her, threw her on the bed and snatched the key, unlocked the closet door, took my clothes and ran away.

"My mother wanted to know where I had been, but I refused to tell her at first, because I was ashamed."

EX-GOV. M'LANE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE DEAD

MILFORD, N. H., April 13.—John McLane, former Governor of New Hampshire and chief executive host of the Roosevelt-Japanese envoys at the signing of the peace treaty of Portsmouth, is dead at Southern Pines, N. C. He had been in ill health several months and went to South Carolina two weeks ago. The cause of death was cirrhosis of the liver. Mr. McLane's illness was augmented by the shock of the sudden death of his Dorothy, son, Charles, at Revere Beach, Mass., a year ago when the young man received fatal injuries by being thrown from a whirling platform in an amusement resort.

DON'T BE MISLED

Stomach Trouble Often Presents Symptoms That May Be Mistaken for Signs of Other Disorders.

Palpitation of the heart does not imply that the vital organ is diseased.

Pain in the back does not necessarily mean kidney disease.

Headache does not often indicate that there is anything wrong with your head.

All of these symptoms are caused by stomach trouble and when this is rightly set the alarming symptoms disappear. If you have them look to the condition of your stomach for the cause before you start to treat the symptoms rather than the disease.

If you are suffering from stomach trouble you cannot do better than follow the advice of Mr. J. S. Barnhart, a farmer, on R. F. D. No. 8, Butler, Pa., who says:

"When living near Mt. Vernon, Ohio, I became seriously ill from stomach trouble and finally had to give up my work as school teacher. I had no appetite and what food I did eat would lie heavily on my stomach. My bowels were irregular and I was reduced in weight from 160 to 130 pounds. I was nervous, could not get a good night's sleep and had no ambition to work. My back ached and there were pains through my arms and shoulders. My heart was weak and the least exertion would cause it to palpitate. In the morning I would be dizzy on getting up from bed and there would be black specks before my eyes. My head would ache all over but particularly in the back. I was pale and had a hacking cough which alarmed my friends.

"The doctor treated me for stomach trouble but didn't help me much and then I tried several medicines which were recommended to me but with no relief. The druggist urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and was so certain that they would help me that I decided to give them a trial. After taking a few boxes I began to feel a little hungry, something I hadn't felt for a year. I also began to sleep better and I was so encouraged that I kept on with the pills. The result was that my stomach became strong, my other troubles disappeared and I was cured."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Steam, Energy, Vitality

ARE ESSENTIALS TO SUCCESS IN ANY LINE OF BUSINESS OR SPORTS

Mr. S. P. Cusack, the well-known big league umpire, tells of how he was benefited.

3216 Lowe Ave., Chicago, Ill.

I was just thinking today of how long I have been a user of your valuable pure malt whiskey. The first time it came to my notice was about fifteen years ago. While I was training in the Spring I contracted a sever cold and Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey was prescribed for me, my doctor telling me that it would not only cure my cold but would act as a tonic stimulant and be beneficial to me in my athletic work.

It did me so much good and kept me in such fine trim that I have never been without it in the house since that time. It keeps a person full of steam, energy and vitality.

I absolutely know that a person can do more hard work and strenuous training and be in better condition physically if he uses Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as prescribed. I always recommend it when any one in our league is not feeling quite up to the mark.

Yours truly,

S. P. Cusack

MR. S. P. CUSACK.

If you wish to keep strong, vigorous and active and enjoy perfect health, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, according to directions. It builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles and richness to the blood. It brings into action all the vital forces, it makes digestion perfect and enables you to get from the food you eat all the nourishment it contains. It is a wonderful remedy in the prevention and cure of nervousness, typhoid, spring fever, malaria, every form of stomach trouble, diseases of the throat and lungs, and is prescribed as a medicine by doctors of all schools.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only whiskey that was taxed by the Government as a medicine during the Spanish-American war.

If in need of advice, write Medical Department The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company, Rochester, N. Y., stating your case fully. Our doctors will send you advice free, together with a valuable medical booklet. Sold IN SEALED BOTTLES ONLY by druggists, grocers and dealers, or direct, $1.00 per large bottle.

SPAIN'S QUEEN, WHO WASHED AND KISSED FEET OF BEGGARS

QUEEN KISSES FEET OF POOR

MADRID, April 14.—Instead of going to Seville, where a round of galeties was originally arranged for, during their visit King Alfonso and Queen Victoria today washed and kissed the feet of ten poor men and women during the Maundy Thursday observances at the royal palace. The ceremony was performed in the presence of princes, grandees, diplomats and church and state dignitaries. The chamberlain poured water on the feet of the poor from a silver jug while a maid of honor held a silver basin and towel.

Afterward a banquet was given to the people. The courses were carried from the kitchen by grandees and were served personally by the King and Queen.

To-morrow, during the "adoration the cross" in the royal palace, the King will pardon eleven men condemned to death, saying "I pardon them so that God may be merciful to me also."

LENOX PRESENTING FOUR DEBUTANTES

LENOX, April 14.—Lenox will have four debutantes early this season. They will be Miss Emily Winthrop, daughter of Mrs. Grenville L. Winthrop; Miss Elizabeth Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Turner; Miss Katherine Lawrence, granddaughter of Charles Lanier; and Miss Charlotte Crane.

BALLOONISTS AVERT DROP ON A CHIMNEY

EAST ALSTEAD, N. H., April 14.—The balloon Cleveland, which ascended at North Adams, Mass., at 10.30 a. m., dropped in a meadow here yesterday afternoon, after a voyage which although measuring only fifty-three miles air-line distance, really took the pilot and four passengers more than 300 miles in three States. A. Lee Stevens of New York, Dr. Heber Bishop, Norman Prince and William M. Hilliard of Boston and Harry Brown of New York were the passengers. Just after ascending in North Adams the balloon struck a gust which forced it down nearly a thousand feet, despite the dropping of ballast, almost on the top of a grand-daughter of Charles Lanier; and Miss grand chimney but a cross current carried the basket over.

SEEK MISSING EVERETT WOMAN

The Boston police have been asked to act as a hunt for Mrs. Annie Kimball of 41 Summer street, Everett, whose disappearance Monday night is a mystery to her friends. Her seven-year-old daughter Ida is mourning her absence.

Mrs. Kimball left the house about 7:30 Monday evening and said she was going to a store to purchase clothing for her daughter. She had very little money with her. When she left the house she wore a blue skirt, black short coat and a light colored straw hat trimmed with black with a black feather. She is described as being about 5 feet 4 inches tall, 140 pounds, dark complexion, about thirty-five years of age and good looking.

How to Treat the Skin

Many skin diseases like eczema are due to an external cause and are not the result of impure blood. The taking of internal medicines is a waste of time and money, as many sufferers can testify. The simplest and safest remedy is Cadum, the new medical compound. It stops the itching at once, and the healing begins immediately. People who have suffered for years and who have tried everything should take fresh courage, for this new compound is different from anything else. It is for sores, psoriasis, ulcers, ringworm, rash, pimples, scaly skin, scabs, eruptions, blotches, itch, etc. 10c and 25c per box.

AMBASSADOR HILL RESIGNS

WASHINGTON, April 14.—A diplomatic sensation was caused to-day when it was announced that David Jayne Hill, ambassador to Germany, had resigned his post.

This unexpected development came with double force upon news flashed from Berlin yesterday, and denied at the German embassy here to-day, that Ambassador von Bernadorff had resigned as Germany's representative to the United States.

The State Department gave no explanation other than that Mr. Hill wished to retire and that the President had accepted with regret. The German embassy denied that von Bernadorff had resigned, and refused to discuss the report further.

The explanation most generally accepted by diplomats is that both ambassadors failed to measure up to the expectations of their governments in the potash dispute negotiations between the United States and Germany.

Not Acceptable to Kaiser?

When Dr. Hill was appointed to Berlin it was reported that he was not entirely acceptable to Emperor William owing to the fact that he was not a millionaire and therefore unable to maintain an establishment in keeping with the Kaiser's conception of the dignity of the position.

Dr. Hill returned to this country recently, and his coming was followed by rumors of an impending change. There were denials by the State Department, however, where it was said that his trip had to do entirely with the potash dispute with Germany.

Ambassador Hill was appointed to represent America in Germany on April 2, 1908. Prior to that time he had wide experience in diplomatic affairs, having been minister plenipotentiary to Switzerland and subsequently to the Netehlands, leaving the latter post to go to Berlin.

Graduate of Bucknell.

Mr. Hill was born in Plainfield, N. J., in 1850. He was graduated from Bucknell University in 1874 and at the age of twenty-nine he became president of that institution—setting the mark of being the youngest college president in America. In 1888 he was called to the presidency of the University of Rochester, a position which he held eight years, during which he wrote a number of books.

The first public recognition of his qualifications as a diplomat was made in 1898, when he was made first assistant secretary of state at Washington.

FRANK SMITH HAS HIS ARM FIXED UP

Frank Smith, the Boston Red Sox pitcher, has returned from his home in Pittsburg, whither he had been sent by Manager Donovan to have his arm "fixed." Frank had been troubled with a sore wing for several days and was unable to throw a ball. According to him the leaders in his arm, whatever they are, were removed by a Pittsburg surgeon. The arm now feels good and Smith says he will be able to pitch as soon as Manager Donovan calls on him. For the present he will remain here with the Yanigans, who are in charge of Jack Thoney and who have some exhibition games scheduled.

FATHER L. J. O'TOOLE LEFT ALL TO CHARITY

The will of the Rev. Lawrence J. O'Toole, formerly pastor of St. Bernard's Church, Newton, was filed at East Cambridge today. Rev. Charles J. Galligan, his assistant, is named as executor. J. C. Whitty, superior-general of the Irish Christian Brothers, is left $5,000; the Home for Destitute Catholic Children is given $5,000; St. John's Ecclesiastical Seminary at Brighton is given $5,000 for the education of some student from St. Bernard's parish. The residue is left to Archbishop O'Connell to be distributed among the charities of the archdiocese of Boston as he may see fit.

RUSSELL WILL CASE WILL BE POSTPONED

The law firm of Berry, Upton & Harvey, counsel for William C. Russell, to-day sent a letter to the clerk of the Supreme Court at East Cambridge asking that the Russell will case be placed on the Supreme Court trial list for next session. The court comes in at Lowell Tuesday. It will sit at East Cambridge by Thursday. It is doubtful if the Russell will case is heard this session, as the Glover case precedes it.

BABY'S ECZEMA BEGAN IN PIMPLES

When Two Weeks Old. Would Water and Itch. Broken Out Most on Face. Used Box of Cuticura Ointment and Nearly Cake of Cuticura Soap. Was Completely Cured.

"My little girl had eczema on her face which first started to break out on her when she was two weeks old. It began in pimples, and would water and itch. It was on the back of her neck in the edge of her hair, and in between her shoulders. But it was broken out the most on her face. "I doctored with two different doctors, and they did not seem to help her. Then a cousin of mine recommended the Cuticura Remedies. She said they cured one of her children, so I tried them, and they gave my child relief. I used a box of Cuticura Ointment and nearly a cake of Cuticura Soap, and my little girl was completely cured. She is three years old now and has not a sign of eczema. I have been keeping the Cuticura Ointment ever since and think the Cuticura Remedies are all right. I tell other people about them and how they cured my little girl." (Signed) Mrs. Minnie Clatter, Deer Lick, Pa., Aug. 29, 1910.

To-day, Good Friday, was observed with special services at the Catholic Churches of the city.

At 8 o'clock this morning the mass of the presanctified was said at the Cathedral and at 3 o'clock the way of the cross exercises were to be held.

At the Church of the Immaculate Conception the exercises to-day consisted of a solemn high mass at 5 o'clock, with the Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., officiating.

The chanting of the Passion and a procession to the repository were followed by the mass of the presanctified.

From 12 to 3 o'clock at this church the devotion of "The Three Hours' Agony" was held. The preacher at this service was the Rev. Robert F. X. Reynolds, S. J., of St. Peter's College, Jersey City, N. J.

HEARING TO BE GIVEN MOMAND

The Finance Commission to-day sent a letter to Vice-president R. Momand of the Pressure Lighting Company, at his headway office, New York, stating that it would be glad to hear him at a public meeting which will be held on Tuesday or Friday of next week on his charges that there has been graft in the contract of the Rising Sun Company of a $1,000,000 lighting contract.

Momand, in a letter to the Finance Commission, again declares that Commissioner of Public Works Rourke ignored his bid and that he is apparently committed to the Rising Sun Company's estimate.

Commissioner Rourke characterizes Momand's charges as absurd and challenges him to take to the District Attorney any evidence that he may have of corruption.

"The whole lighting question is more and above board," said Rourke. "The City Council should be given the opportunity and must under the charter give it the lowest scrutiny. The City is in the market for the best possible price and it matters little who submits the figure. Whoever submits the lowest, satisfactory estimate will get the contract, and Momand or anybody else to declare that they have not been given a square deal is preposterous."

Momand has promised to appear before the City Council when that body gives its public hearing upon the lighting question on April 28.

MEXICAN CITY TAKEN BY SIEGE

EL PASO, Tex., April 14.—It was reported here today that Ojinaga, Mexico, has been captured by the rebels under General Sanchez. Ojinaga has been besieged for nearly two months.

In the endeavor to drown the insurrection in the blood of prisoners, President Diaz is executing his enemies in the wholesale, according to reports here. Railroad men arriving today told gruesome stories of the slaughter. They say nine were shot to death at Saltillo, twenty summarily executed at Guanaguato and a batch of thirty, slain by federals in Chihuahua.

Scores of others have been executed in other districts. The jails are full of prisoners, many of the families of insurrectos being cast into jail as a "species of treason against the government."

The local lands characterize President Diaz's stern measures as a "reign of butchery."

Yankees Stop Battle.

American intervention in Mexico became a reality yesterday, when American troops crossed the border and put an end to a battle between federals and insurrectos at Agua Prieta, Arizona.

The battle lasted all the afternoon and resulted in the capture of Agua Prieta by the rebels, commanded by Emil Kosterlitzky.

The action of the American troops was taken after two Americans had been killed and several wounded in the battle, which is directly across the line from Agua Prieta, and the continued firing was endangering the lives of many American United States territory.

Agua Prieta is under constant fire three times.

Agua Prieta is the terminal of the Nacozari railroad into Sonora, and is the most important point on the border between El Paso and the Pacific ocean.

Robert Harrington was a switchman employed in the yards of Douglas and was on his train at Fourth street, Douglas. A bullet struck him in the head and he tumbled from the car. He was picked up and taken in a wagon to the Copper Queen Hospital, where he died within an hour.

Another Shot on Train.

L. B. Crow, another switchman, was on the same train and the same volley that killed Harrington swept him from the car also. He was shot through the body from side to side and probably will die. Crow's family reside in Colorado.

A. R. Dickson, half owner of the Washington mine, was shot through the thigh. The bone is broken and the wound may prove fatal.

Dickson, the American shot through the thigh, had taken a position behind a little dirt embankment just south of Nacozari station on the Mexican side, with a stack of rifles. Both waved their white handkerchiefs at a squad of federals, but no sign of peace was answered by a volley of shots, one of which struck Dickson and he fell to the ground.

GLOVER CONTEST OPENS THURSDAY

The contest over the will of Clarence F. Glover, the Waltham inventroman who was shot and killed in his laundry a year ago last November, is to be fought before a jury in the Supreme Court at East Cambridge. This was decided to-day. The hearing will probably start next Thursday when the court comes down from Lowell.

Hattie Le Blanc, the sixteen-year-old Glover domestic who was tried and acquitted for his murder and who is now at her home in West Arlebat, N. S., will probably be a witness at the will trial. Interrogatories to be answered to her by one she does come to Boston to testify, were filed at East Cambridge recently.

The will is being contested by four brothers of Clarence Glover. The estate was divided under the will between Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, the widow, and Seymour Glover, a fifth brother. The will was allowed in the Probate Court by Judge Schofield.

Fletcher Ranney to-day joined the staff of lawyers in combating the contention of the Glover brothers that the will should be set aside. Samuel B. Elmore to-day retired as counsel in the case, because he is to be a witness.

YALE'S NEW STADIUM WILL BE FIREPROOF

NEW HAVEN, April 14.—The burning of the Polo Grounds stands in New York settled the fact that Yale will have a new $500,000 concrete stadium. The alumni committee recently appointed to take up the question met to-day and was unanimous in declaring that it is not safe to trust to wooden structures. They will be in session two days. They choose Samuel J. Elder of Boston, chairman to-day.

PAPOOSE GETS MIDNIGHT NAME

When all was still at the quarters of the 101 Ranch and Wild West at the Boston Arena, just after midnight, there was a low, rumbling sound from the tan bark space in the middle of the big enclosure. It was an Indian tom-tom. There was a spark, a flame and then a campfire leaved forth from the darkness, revealing all the 200 Indians of the big show.

The chiefs, braves, squaws and children had stolen into the arena at night for, to them, a most important occasion. It was the christening of the boy papoose, child of Chief Long Arrow and Ila-lah-lo, his squaw. The future chief, six months old, was held by his Indian mother, while all the chiefs and braves danced the christening dance around in solemn file.

This dance was kept up for fifteen minutes longer than usual, for this papoose is destined to become an important Indian. He is a great-great-grandson of old Geronimo, the fierce warrior who cost the Uncle Sam thousands of lives and much money before he was subdued.

The papoose was named "Little Bull," the name selected in previous conclave of the elders of the Indian contingent of the 101 Ranch.

The loss is estimated at $100,000.

ASTOR TO WED FAMOUS TWIN

NEW YORK, April 14.—Society is expecting the formal announcement in a few days of the engagement of two of its most conspicuous young members. After an ardent youthful courtship of nearly a year, it is tacitly admitted that Vincent Astor, only son of Colonel John Jacob Astor, has won the heart and hand of Miss Catherine L. Hamersley, who, with her brother, L. Gordon, inherited millions from several members of their family.

Colonel Astor is out of town now, not to return until next week.

At the Hamersley mansion, No. 1,039 Fifth avenue, Mrs. C. D. Lowrie, one of the guardians and the confidante since infancy of Miss Hamersley, answered quickly: "Why, I cannot discuss that matter."

Asked well when the formal announcement of the engagement was to be made she replied:

"I cannot talk about it at all all."

Sensibly Trained Youth.

Vincent Astor, his father's chum, and destined to be the principal heir of the hundred or more millions of real estate in the family, is one of the most sensibly trained young men of the city. Instead of the frills of society his training has been practical, fitting him to take charge some day of the immense estate which will come to him under the custom of the Astor family. It is a tradition of this family that the head of it personally directs his vast property, devoting constant study to its improvement.

Miss Catherine Hamersley is one of the two children of the late J. Hooker Hamersley, who, marrying late in life, died about nine years ago. His wife soon followed him.

The father and mother left a fortune to the children and this was added to by the death of Louis Hamersley, who bequeathed the bulk of his fortune to his wife, who afterwards became Lilly, Duchess of Marlboro. She and but a life interest of the estate and when she died several years ago she was able to leave all of the surplus of her income something like $500,000 to a son by her last marriage. The two Hamersley children thus became heirs to a fortune estimated between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000.

No Pampered Children.

Trust companies, Cortlandt DePeyster Field, the late Mrs. Charles Stickney, Mrs. Hamilton Fish Keane, and Mrs. Lowrie became the guardians. The Hamersley mansion is at Eighty-fourth street and Fifth avenue, and the courts decreed very moderate allowances for the two children, the boy who was then twelve and the girl eleven, of which the fortune came to them.

They were raised in ignorance of the great fortune which was to be theirs and. They dressed simply and lived plainly. Both went to private schools and there was nothing to indicate that they were to inherit one of the greatest estates in the land some day.

Miss Kitty Hamersley, as she is known by her intimate friends, has been a much-sought girl since her debut and from time to time there have been intimations that various youths were favored. All appeared to have an equal chance until the present social season began, and then young Mr. Astor appeared on the list and became a formidable competitor at once. For several months he has had the field practically to himself.

BLACK HAND VICTIM'S BODY IN THE WATER

NEW YORK, April 14.—Deputy Police Commissioner Flynn's central office detectives are at work to-day trying to solve the mystery surrounding the murder of a man whose mutilated body was found floating in Long Island Sound to-day. It is believed he was a victim of the Black Hand. There were two bullet holes in the forehead and a long knife gash on the left cheek.

MAN SHOPLIFTER GIVEN TWO YEARS

Charged with stealing four leather traveling bags in a down town store, Arthur Manning, aged twenty-four, who said he lived at No. 1084 Washington street, was found guilty in the Municipal Court today and sentenced to two years in the house of correction. He appealed.

DOES THIS OPINION APPLY TO ACTION OF SHAW EXECUTORS?

The effort to use existing law or take advantage of its provisions to procure private advantage in matters affecting the municipality or the State may well be a challenge to the public spirit of bar associations and individual lawyers. Whatever may be said of the cupidity of such attempts to overreach, the usefulness to the public of disinterested, able and acute attacks upon them by those who have no interest except to serve the public weal outside elective or appointive office through agitation by writing, speaking and otherwise can hardly be overestimated.—From the address of Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Supreme Court to the students of Boston University School of Law.

The State Senate to-day reconsidered the enactment of the Boston & Northern-Old Colony Street Railway consolidation bill, and adopted an order asking Attorney-General Swift's opinion as to whether the bill allows Old Colony bonds to become legal investments for savings banks before the year 1913, when they might become legal without consolidation of the two roads.

BOSTON AUTHOR IN AN ASYLUM

It will be cheering news to the Boston friends of J. Cheever Goodwin, formerly of this city, who was sent to Bloomingdale Asylum in New York for treatment three weeks ago, to learn that New York dispatches today quote the medical experts as saying that Mr. Goodwin's trouble is purely of nervous nature and that his recovery is promised within the year.

"I'd rather be dead than stay a year from Broadway, the librettist said, when he finally consented to his own commitment to Bloomingdale.

Cheever Goodwin is one of the most prolific light opera and musical comedy librettists in America. More than forty plays have been written or adapted by him. The best known are "Wang" and "Dr. Syntax" for De Wolf Hopper, and "The Merry Monarch," "The Lion Tamer" and "The Monks of Malabar" for Francis Wilson.

He first came into notice in Boston as the joint worker on "Evangeline" with H. E. Rice and was associated with that energetic impresario for more than twenty years. He worked in the earlier days with Woolson Morse, the composer, and later with Ludwig Englander. The Goodwins had eleven children and six are now living. The elder children have followed stage careers.

He was graduated at Harvard with the class of 1873 and was the best known athlete of his period at that institution. He was idolized as the pitcher of the first baseball nine which the university ever sent away from Cambridge to play other colleges. He studied law but soon abandoned it for a literary life. His wife was Miss Ida Driggs of this city.

MAINE SENATOR HAS A DOUBLE IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 13.—"The Senator from California" shouted Vice-President Sherman when Mr. Johnson, the new Democratic Senator from Maine, sought recognition. Mr. Johnson did not correct the Vice-President. Mr. Sherman has made a like mistake before, and Mr. Johnson is becoming reconciled to it. Mr. Works of California is a Republican, and Mr. Johnson so closely resemble each other that it is difficult for Mr. Sherman to distinguish between them. Both are tall, broad-shouldered, round-faced, smooth-shaven, powerfully built men.

MEDICINE BY QUART FOR SICK ELEPHANT

NEW YORK, April 14.—Hattie, a tried elephant, whose antics have delighted thousands of visitors to Central Park Menagerie, is recovering from an attack of "clover colic." She over ate. Hattie's age is some ten Summers, and her weight three tons. When she has an ache this pain is proportionate to her tonnage. This is the dose prescribed for her: Laudanum two ounces, linseed oil two quarts, spirits of turpentine one quart. It took a wrestle between her, jaws and a block and tackle to get the dose into her.

FIRE STAMPEDE IN SALVATION ARMY

NEW YORK, April 14.—Three hundred men, lodgers in the Salvation Army Industrial Home, No. 120 Bleecker street, Brooklyn, were imperilled by fire today, when flames broke out in the rear of the building. Hundreds of residents of adjoining tenement houses rushed in panic to the street before the blaze was extinguished.

To Grow Hair on a Bald Head

By a Specialist.

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and failing hair who, having tried nearly every advertised hair tonic and hair grower without results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless, the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and is also unequalled for restoring grey hair to its original color, stopping hair from falling out, and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair coarse, and can be put up by any druggist. The ingredients are all staple, standard and inexpensive.

Bay Rum	6 oz.
Lavona de Composee	2 oz.
Menthol Crystals	½ dr.

Apply night and morning, rubbing briskly into the scalp with the finger tips or a medium stiff brush. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians and specialists and is absolutely harmless, as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics. Do not apply to the face or where hair is not desired.

N. H. LABOR BILL PASSES SENATE

CONCORD, N. H., April 14.—The bill providing for employers' liability and workmen's compensation was passed in concurrence by the New Hampshire Senate today. The vote was 19 to 4. The dissenting Senators were Hosford, Gerry, Hayden and Paul.

The bill as passed by the Senate today, however, is so emasculated by amendments that it may not meet the approval of Governor Bass.

Both political parties made the passage of this legislation a part of their platforms in the last campaign, and Governor Bass advocated it.

The railroad rate bill, carrying the amendments suggested by Mellen and satisfactory to Governor Bass, came to the House last night. The bill was promptly laid upon the table to await Tuesday, when the Senate should also send to the bill establishing a Public Utilities Board.

The Public Utilities bill came along. The celebrated Rich "rider" suggested by counsel for the Boston & Maine, had been stricken out, but in its place was found, word for word, the rate bill, already sent down and now on the House table. In this situation a Committee of Conference was inevitable.

Former Senator William E. Chandler and former Judge James W. Remick, both long prominent in the fight to keep the railroad out of politics, are neither of them satisfied with the temporary settlement of the rate fight. They want it settled permanently. Senator Chandler has been insisting that the only proper message for the Legislature to send to the railroad is "obey the law." Judge Remick agrees with him. Regardless of Governor Bass and the Progressive Republicans as a whole, Chandler and Remick will continue the fight.

DECISION RESERVED IN GRIFFIN WILL CASE

WORCESTER, April 14.—Judge Frederick H. Chamberlain, sitting in the Probate Court, gave a hearing on the petition of John J. Griffin of Boston, Honora Kingsley of Chelsea, James F. Griffin of Salem and James Ryan of Worcester for an order vacating a decree issued by Judge William T. Forbes on February 21, 1911, allowing the will of the late Mgr. Thomas Griffin. The petitioners are relatives of the priest and they contested the allowance of the will last February on the ground that Mgr. Griffin was not in a mental condition to dispose of his estate, $40,000, which he left to Catholic charities. Judge Chamberlain reserved his decision.

PLAN TO REIMBURSE EX-GOVERNOR LADD

PROVIDENCE, April 14.—To reimburse him in part for the money he spent on the new State House, a resolution has been introduced in the Legislature appropriating $75,000 to be paid former Governor Herbert Ladd, who was this State's chief executive from 1890 to 1890 and from 1891 to 1892. At the time the $3,000,000 State Capitol was being constructed former Governor Ladd gave a large part of his fortune for the work. He is now comparatively a poor man and an invalid at a sanitarium. He also gave to Brown University of the Ladd Observatory.

NO MONEY TROUBLE IN BACON ROMANCE

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Colonel Henry May, father of Miss Cecilia May, whose engagement to Robert Low Bacon, son of the American Ambassador to France, was broken off recently, today definitely ended speculation as to the cause by stating that his daughter had broken the engagement because Mr. Bacon refused to make the promises relating to mixed marriages required by the Catholic church. He denied that money settlements had anything to do with the matter, as reported yesterday.

GRANT LICENSE OVER PROTEST OF O'MEARA

Police Commissioner O'Meara appeared at a public hearing before the Somerville aldermen last night and protested against the granting of a private garage license to William J. Bigley of No. 157 College avenue, West Somerville, a near neighbor of the commissioner's sister. Mr. O'Meara maintained that a garage would prove annoying to residents and would injure the value of property. The license was granted.

Kuppenheimer $20 Business Suit

I AM the biggest individual distributor of Kuppenheimer clothing in America---and there isn't a dead one on the list. I have to go some to put that record across every season, but I never yowl about speed when the going is good.

The Kuppenheimer people know me from caviar to black coffee. They have played Kennedy to win, place and show in every town I have entered. I don't have to explain anything to Kuppenheimer.

If I ordered ten thousand suits of clothing to be delivered in Boston by this time next week, they would hire a special train to get it here—and no questions about the money. My order is good for 250,000 American dollars with any big clothing house in this country—I mean big clothing house—I never do business with pikers.

And say! If the biggest clothing manufacturers the world ever saw will solicit my business—knowing they are going to get the spot cash the day they deliver the goods—do you think you are taking any chances when I tell you that I'll put your money back into your hands if you ever buy anything at a Kennedy store that doesn't prove absolutely satisfactory to you in every way?

A syndicate with enough coin can buy anything I own except my reputation. I wouldn't sell my record as a clothing man for all the money that Carnegie hasn't given away for libraries. I mean that—every word of it—and every man with red blood in his system who reads this talk knows that I mean it.

I know just one thing about the clothing business better than I know anything else. If I can get the confidence of the people, I can do business with them. I don't want anybody who reads my advertising to think I'm blowing about myself. I can't write the kind of advertising that other dealers have written for them. I tried to think up a few adjectives that had not yet been used about clothing—but it gave me brain fag—I would have been daffy in two more weeks if I had kept going.

Take this from me! All the swell descriptions of clothing that you ever read—all the con about "style"—"swagger"—"elegance"—"texture"—"fabric"—"refinement"—"culture"—"distinction"—"grace"—"apparel"—"smartness" can all be stacked up against one Kuppenheimer 1911 suit (or topcoat), and they will all fade away.

Back into the spelling book. What you want is a suit of clothes—not a lesson in rhetoric—and if you will come to my store—the largest and handsomest clothing store ever seen in Boston—I will guarantee that you can find just what you want—at a price about $5 inside of what any other clothing man in Boston will charge you for a suit of equal value.

Right from the workrooms of the world's great leaders in the making of fine clothes for men—every color—every style—every model that any sane man can ask—

KUPPENHEIMER TOP COAT EXTRA

Last week Friday I advertised 300 Kuppenheimer Top Coats, in new cheviot twills—grays, browns, and dark and light tans. Every coat in this lot was silk lined—beautiful coats, if you ever saw a slick coat in your life. Well! the folks surely did want some of those coats. The line is pretty well bent—even if not really broken, and if you can find one of those coats that will fit you, I advise you to nail it, at once.

Just for an Easter greeting to new patrons of the Kennedy store, I'll sell these at..... $20

KENNEDY EXTRA—1

If I could give clothing to everybody for nothing I would do so. But even then, I might run into a snag once in a while—getting the RIGHT CLOTHES onto the RIGHT MAN. The best way, after all, is to have a price that will meet the wants of everybody. Some men can't afford to wear KUPPENHEIMER clothes because of the price. That would be a sad story if I couldn't provide a good substitute for the man of modest means. But I have but the thing—in suits or overcoats—a regular $20 line of KENNEDY BOSTON-MADE clothes—that I will guarantee in every way—choice at..... $15

KENNEDY EXTRA—2

I have made it a rule—all my business life—always to have the goods a man wanted—if they were in the market, anywhere—and I could stand back of them. I never sold a suit that was not all wool, guaranteed to me, or send them back to the factory. I will not sell lemons until I go into the fruit business for good. To meet my request for a substantial and stylish line of all-wool suits and overcoats, I have had several BOSTON makers bid for a big contract. The results are satisfactory to ME. They will be to YOU—a suit (or overcoat) for the low figure of..... $12.50

PUBLICITY BILL UP IN THE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The Rucker bill, providing for the publicity of campaign contributions, was presented to the House, to-day by the Committee on Elections No. 3 and was immediately made the order of business. Chairman Underwood of the Ways and Means Committee served notice that as soon as the bill passed the House he would call up the Canadian reciprocity measure.

It was agreed that the House would debate the bill two hours to-day, and that the Republicans would be given the opportunity of amending it if they so desired. The bill was expected to pass the House this afternoon, when the House would take up the reciprocity agreement, upon which two days' debate will be had.

The Rucker bill provides that the names of all persons, firms or corporations who give money to or aid to finance any national election shall be made public at least ten days before election and not afterwards, as is now the custom.

Republican opposition to the campaign publicity bill developed on the ground that it does not take in the primaries.

"You Democrats in the South make all your fights in the primaries," said Representative Kahn of California." After you get nominated in the primaries you don't need a dollar to be elected. This bill is inadequate, and I would be glad to vote against it.

"You have never heard of anyone in the South spending as much as in the Joe Sibley election in Pennsylvania," shouted Representative Hardy of Texas.

"Well, Sibley probably landed when he was a Democrat," was the retort made by Kahn.

4,000 CLERGY HOLD CORONATION SERVICE

LONDON, April 14.—Four thousand churchmen, headed by the Bishop of London, marched through the streets to St. Paul's Cathedral this afternoon for a coronation service with a special ritual asking divine guidance for the King about to be crowned. The weather was fair and warm and thousands lined the route. The marchers sang hymns in which the spectators joined at times.

FLAMES DESTROY THREE COTTAGES

Three Summer cottages were destroyed and a fourth badly damaged by a fire which for a time threatened the Summer colony at Wessaguscet Hill, North Weymouth, last night. The loss is estimated at $6,000. The cottages were owned by Charles Leavitt of Weymouth, George Weeks of Boston and Albert Reed of Brockton. An explosion of a lamp in the Leavitt cottage started the blaze.

FOSS MESSAGE ON ECONOMICS

Unsatisfactory records of employes' time and variations in respect to sick leave and to rates of pay during absence from office are noted by Governor Foss in sending to the Legislature the report of Harvey S. Chase, expert accountant, of the Insurance Commissioner's department. In his message accompanying the Chase report the Governor says in part:

"I call your attention to Mr. Chase's figures regarding the moneys collected by this department, which now approximate $100,000 annually, although the Hobbs bonds under which the Insurance Commissioner's office is now under censure. The lax methods of administration throughout the offices of the Commonwealth, to which such lack of uniformity has arisen, calls for correction.

WELSHMEN ELECT CYMRODORION HEADS

The Cymrodorion, the Welsh society of Boston, at its annual meeting last night in Armenian Temple elected the following officers: William E. Thomas, president; James Johnstone, vice-president; Thomas Owen, secretary; David R. Davies, financial secretary; John William, treasurer; David Davies, auditor; E. Lloyd Evans, musical director; G. David Williams, chairman. Thomas J. Jones, librarian, and John B. Davies, trustee, of the sinking fund. Mrs. Laura Davies Harvey of Bryntirion in behalf of the club presented a pair of binocular field glasses to the retiring president, Thomas J. Phelps of Cambridge.

SALEM BAR FIGHTS CHANGE OF COURT

A committee of four appointed by the Salem Bar Association to-day began an active campaign against the passage of Senate bill No. 422, the purpose of which is to transfer the town of Marblehead from the jurisdiction of the Salem Police Court to that of Lynn. A resolution was adopted at last night's meeting of the association, protesting against the bill as creating unnecessary expense and putting Salem lawyers to a great inconvenience. The committee consists of William D. Chapple, former president of the Senate; Daniel C. Manning, Michael L. Sullivan and Edward J. Carney.

BRIBE CHARGES IN NEW YORK ASSEMBLY

NEW YORK, April 14.—Assemblymen Artemus Ward, Jr., announces to-day that he would take action next week which would bring the entire matter of alleged bribe offers to effect the election of William F. Sheehan to the United States Senate, before the State Legislature and result in a thorough investigation. Assemblyman Ward is particularly anxious to have an inquiry made into a story to the effect that Assemblyman Harold J. Fried-man of New York was offered a Municipal Court judgeship if he would quit the insurgents and vote for Sheehan.

AGED EDITOR IS BURNED TO DEATH

CLAREMONT, N. H., April 14.—Samuel Henry Story, 78 years old, who for many years published the temperance paper here called The Narrative, was burned to death in a fire to-day in a shed which destroyed his printing office. Chief Sears and Fireman Mayo tried to rescue Story, but were driven back by the flames. They finally cut a hole through the side of the building. Story was dead when they got to him. Story had been famous in this locality for a quarter of a century. He devoted his life to the cause of temperance and boasted that he lived for years on nine cents a day.

AMESBURY ROBBERS GET FIFTY DOLLARS

AMESBURY, April 14.—Fifty dollars was stolen and an attempt made to blow the safe in the fish market owned by John J. Quinn on Friend street early to-day. Entrance was gained by jimmying a rear door.

BILL PASSES SENATE ON LICENSE AUCTIONS

The Senate to-day passed to be engrossed a bill authorizing the Boston Licensing Board to sell at public auction all liquor licenses which have not yet been issued.

DRIVEN INSANE PICKING A WIFE

WORCESTER, April 14.—Inability to choose a wife from the long list of eligible women in line by a Chicago matrimonial agency was given as the cause for the mental trouble by Joseph Byron of Royalston, who has been committed to the Worcester State Hospital.

Byron took the agency route because, he said, he wanted a housewife. Byron took the actors, and they persisted in sending me names. If one got a lot of money to pay their fares and I was continually disappointed when they arrived."

100 IMPERILLED BY A GAS LEAK

NEW YORK, April 14.—One hundred persons in the five-story tenement house at No. 649 East Fifty-first street narrowly escaped being asphyxiated to-day by gas. As it was, five persons in one family were overcome, and one of them was taken to Flower Hospital in a dying condition.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

STORM KILLS 9 IN ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS, April 14.—Two women, who were slightly injured in the cyclone in this city five years ago, are among the nine victims of the cyclone which struck this city and Jefferson County last evening. They died of fright. Seven other persons are reported dead and the property loss in this city alone is placed at almost $3,000,000.

An eight-story grain elevator, valued at $700,000, in the extreme northern end of the city on the Burlington tracks, was blown into the Mississippi River.

Dr. Hugo Tausig, of Berlin, Praises Sirolin

Says it is the Leading Remedy for Treatment of Pulmonary and Bronchial Affections

Dr. Tausig, the eminent German lung and throat specialist, adds his testimony to the virtues of the new Swiss Remedy, SIROLIN, in the "Medizinische Klinik" as follows:

"I have found that SIROLIN, even in the absence of the strictest hygienic method of treatment which is so important nowadays, produced such beneficial results that I am sure SIROLIN must rank as the leading remedial agent in tuberculosis of the lungs and in the treatment of mino bronchial affections." Dr. Tausig's testimonial is in accord with that of leading specialists of Europe.

SIROLIN is now sold direct to sufferers by leading druggists. If not readily procurable address the sole agents for the United States, THE SIROLIN COMPANY, 365 Canal St., New York.

MELLEN GIVES PLEDGE TO WORK FOR BOSTON'S SHIPPING SUPREMACY

Mellen's Plans for Boston

Here are some of the plans advocated by President Mellen of the New Haven Railroad for the development of Boston harbor, as outlined to business men at the Somerset:

Boston should control its own waterfront, and own its own piers instead of selling and leasing your waterfront in South Boston, take back what you have already disposed of, and build modern fireproof structures on the piers and put yourself in readiness for any steamship yet projected.

Fill up the South Bay

Start by straightening Northern avenue. Build a two-level street

Develop the East Boston property.

Remove the pile structures in the Charles River and make the railroads enter the city under the river in a real union station.

Business interests of Boston and the whole of New England discussed with ... tense interest today [illegible] prepared and notable address ... before the Boston Chamber of Commerce at Hotel Somerset last evening by Charles S. Mellen, president of the New Haven Railroad.

President Mellen's address was a veritable battle cry in the interest of Boston. He pictured in plain language how it is now possible for the commercial dream of his life to be realized—a dream that would make Boston, as this city of right ought to be, the greatest port on the Atlantic coast.

Right now—today—when the shipping interests of the country are looking for a port to take care of the great vessels that are to carry our commerce in the future, when New York finds her facilities inadequate, this is the opportune time for Boston to step to the front and revolutionize the business not only of this city, nor of New England alone, but the whole continent.

President Mellen, because of his great power as the head of practically the entire railroad systems of New England, stands today as the Man of the Hour for the interests of Boston. He does not ... to be more than willing to do his part, but he pleads with Boston to take advantage of the great opportunity that is open to it.

That was high praise for power to ... said President Mellen, speaking of himself personally. ... other man in all the country ... dreams, hopes and ... of each of us ... mate influence ... bigger scheme ... able to pursue the ... actual work

Ambition of a Lifetime.

As a boy, as a young business man, as the head of the powerful railway interest headed by the New Haven road President Mellen declares that the ambition of his life—of thinking, planning, fighting for—has been to help Boston. What is her right—the business purpose of the son that should ... to her.

In such a message that President Mellen gives to Boston today there is the ... pledge, in behalf of Boston ... on a commercial right:

"You should have this business as a right, not as a favor from any one, and no combination of natural or artificial beings should say you nay."

Mr. Mellen points out what he ... plain ... this can't be brought ... way ... else, can't more than ... against the ... tax ... Conditions ... the ... 1912 ... Why ... the business ... AT FUN ... If not only requires action, Mr. Mellen points out, but it takes money. And a lot of it!

Mr. Mellen's Proposition.

This is about what President Mellen proposes on the expense end of the thing:

RUSTLERS PLAY BROOKLYN THE RUBBER GAME

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

PICK CURTIS TO LEAD RUSTLERS TO VICTORY

By R. W. LARDNER.

This was more like a real baseball day than anything that has been provided for Boston fans since the season opened. The warming up meant that a goodly crowd would visit the South End grounds to see the third game of the first series between the Rustlers and Dodgers.

Cliff Curtis, the tall, slender right hander, was elected to pitch for the Beaneaters. Curtis worked out last Monday at Baltimore and displayed lots of "stuff," even if he was short on control.

Knetzer and Aitchison were the Brooklyn candidates. The former is the more experienced, but the latter is a southpaw, and Manager Dahlen elected to work one of this kind against the Boston team.

Occupants of Stand Comfortable.

The air was a bit chilly yesterday, as the wind was kind enough to let a few and the spectators spent an actually comfortable afternoon, physically. They didn't like the way the game turned out but they did enjoy the change in the weather that made it possible for them to sit there without violent attacks of shivers.

Speaking of the weather, Charles Ebbets, president of the Dodgers, is here with his team. Mr. Ebbets has nothing to do with the atmospheric state of the baseball condition, but the weather is the principal topic of conversation this trip. You know, Charles is a believer in a long baseball schedule. He would like to have sixty calling for 168 games and would also be pleased if the campaign were started earlier in the Spring, like the warmth of yesterday and the fact that a game was possible the day before have been recited as an argument by the Dodger chief.

He figures that Spring weather is uncertain at best, and it's just as likely to be wintry in May or the latter part of April, as it is now. Therefore, he thinks there would be no more postponements and no more shivers if the season was opened on April Fool's Day. He has a right to his opinion, and if he can convince the other club owners that his reasoning is good, earlier starts may be expected hereafter.

Mattern Not at His Best.

This Brooklyn team has a peculiar third baseman. He has a peculiar left hand. It is a most active one. From what has been seen of him so far it is gathered that he would rather pick up a ball with his glove than with both fists. His name is Zimmerman, but he is no relation to Heine of the Cubs. He made an error in the first two games here and five of the following gloved hand stops. After a while the Rustlers will size up and cease hitting ground balls to this young man's left.

Albert Mattern was nowhere near his best yesterday and the Dodgers drove him to the shed with a rain of base hits. Nap Rucker was called in to help him and he got along a little better, but his support wasn't the best that you ever saw. "Matty" lasted four innings. Sam sent the next four and Dahlen was retracted to give Jack Spratt a chance to bit in a pinch.

Billie Burke, who seems to be a pretty staunch Rustler for a man who is supposed to have been traded to Montreal, worked the final chapter and two runs were gathered off him. Rudolph Hess succeeded Jake Daubert after he had two bands down.

George Bell may have looked good by contrast with the three Rustler pitchers, but he was really rather shaky himself. He had all the luck in the world, and the game would have been much closer. The Rustlers kept getting openings, but they were unable to do anything with them until it was too late. The score was 7 to 2.

Ingerton Worried by Bunts.

"Silent John" Hummel led his club's onslaught with four safe whacks in five attempts, and three of his four smashes were doubles. Hummel is the player who held out for $500 extra because the duties of field captain weighed on him. So he duly removed the duties. Al Burch is now field captain and he isn't even on the field except in practice or when he is batting.

"Scotty" Ingerton had some trouble with bunts. The Dodgers began laying them down after Frock had gone in and the first two were made the attempts were successful. They were hard luck to handle and lots of third baseman would have failed to turn them into outs. Scotty was unlucky enough to uncork a wild throw to first base and it resulted in a run in the fifth inning. Ingerton also made a couple of other errors, but they didn't count as Brooklyn had already scored.

Jake Daubert came to bat in the fifth inning with the bases full and two out. He hit a hard ball to Curtis, but the latter was unable to handle it, and the ball rolled into right field. Two runs scored. Daubert was credited with a single and one two-bagger. He didn't cross one safely. Stengel hit for Frock in the ninth, but got a soft fly to Ingerton. Hummel popped to Curtis and Dahlen struck out.

Manager Herzog is thus demonstrating the wisdom of the saying, "Don't sniff at the bunt in baseball." His pertinent remarks yesterday were the watchword of the day and each time he uttered a Dahlen player on the coaching lines were on extended and back to handle.

NAME OFFICIALS FOR YALE-HARVARD MEET

James E. Sullivan of the Pastime A. C. of New York has been chosen referee and W. H. Robertson of the New York A. C. has been selected as starter for the indoor dual track meet between Harvard and Yale in New Haven May 13. This decision was reached at a conference between Captain Foster and Manager Floyd of Harvard and Captain Kilpatrick and Manager Sloane of the Yale team at the Hotel Touraine. The judges for the meet have also been selected tentatively, but as the consent of three men to serve has not yet been obtained their names are not been announced. Plans for the proposed International meet of Harvard, Yale with Oxford and Cambridge universities in England in the first part of July, were discussed at some length, but nothing definite was decided upon.

YACHT CLUB BUYS COHASSET BOATS

Members of the Bridgeport Yacht Club have purchased several Cohasset one-design knockabouts and it is expected that the entire fleet may be transplanted to Long Island sound. The boats were built by Lawley in 1904 from designs by C. A. Herreshoff, their general dimensions being: Length over all, 25.6 feet; waterline, 17 feet, beam, 7.2 feet, draft 4 feet.

The boats have small cabins and make interesting sport. A cup for one-design racing may be established by the Cohasset Club, and one of the new designs for the trophy was made through the Hollis Burgess yacht agency.

NEW YORK POLICE STOP KURTZ BOUT

NEW YORK, April 14.—Police Captain McElroy of the Twenty-third police precinct stopped the bout between Kid Wilson and Young Kurtz, a Newark welterweight, at the Long Acre A. C. here tonight. Kurtz had the better of what little action there was done in the bout, and there was little doubt that he would have won a decision had not the referee stopped the contests.

The episode in this city against boxing is becoming active. The police for several days have been endeavoring to secure evidence through newspaper reporters.

M'ALEER RELEASES THREE PLAYERS

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Manager McAleer of the Washington club released right Harvey Bussey, the pitcher secured from the Danville club of the Virginia League, and outfielder "Doc" Meyer, who joined the Nationals near the close of last season, the latter having been returned to Youngstown. David Bunting, a substitute infield baseman, was given his unconditional release. Meyer caught cold in his shoulder and pitching arm last Spring, which seriously impaired his work.

MORIN WINS SERIES.

CHICAGO, April 14.—Charles Morin of Chicago defeated Pierce Maupome of St. Louis in the seventh and deciding game of the $1,000 challenge series at three-cushion billiards after 60 thirty-five Morin ran out his string in seventy-five innings and averaged 60.0, while his opponent averaged 47.3. Each player had a high run of three.

MATTY BALDWIN TO MEET LEACH CROSS

Matty Baldwin has been matched to meet Leach Cross at the National Sporting Club in New York, on Friday, April 28. Matty had been previously matched to meet Fighting Dick Hyland, but this match fell through and the one with Cross was taken on yesterday. George A. Lee of Cambridge is to be the referee at Jim O'Rourke's club on the same night. As a point has not yet been decided upon.

Spring football practice came to a close yesterday afternoon at Harvard with a fast scrimmage of fifteen minutes, in which Team A defeated Team B, 6 to 0, on touchdowns. Bloodgett at guard made the first score when he recovered a fumble and ran fifty yards for the touchdown. Practically unassisted Captain Fisher got in the mix up at goal yesterday and showed a lot of his old time speed and skill, despite the fact that the day was really too warm for football work.

What He Saw in Her

By NELL BRINKLEY

A CHAP had a sweetheart once. She was really and truly just an ordinary sweet little woman with normal eyes and nose and mouth, and regular-sized feet.

Well, the first time the chap sat looking at her she was just a colorless girl with sharp elbows, a thin neck, an ample waist, collarbones humping up at the root of her neck, kinky, pale brown hair and a pretty twinkle in her eye. And he could see every hunt and gather and flower in her frock and tell all about it afterward!

And as he saw every detail of the pattern in the Japanese screen behind her—her face was only a tiny flower in all the rather attractive bit of decoration she made. His head was steady, and his two eyes—reliable, and things hadn't begun yet to twist and shrink and grow as they did after.

And he saw her again. This time there was more face and eyes to her. He didn't see what was behind her. The shadows had faded and some way she sort of lighted up things around her.

Some way his fancy sort of trimmed her down; it rubbed off some of her edges; and he saw the shadows around her, and he didn't see any collarbones and pointed elbows. He thought her hair was mighty curly and blond, and that her fingers turned up on the ends (She knew her fingers didn't turn up on the ends.) And he only knew that her frock was black and white. He couldn't remember any knots and gathers.

And that night he thought and thought about the twinkles in her eyes.

And after that everything began to fade but the face of her. And it grew brighter and "beautifuller" "some day after day."

It stood out from the rest of her and the things around her, like a gorgeous flower blazing out of a pale mist; and you can just guess that he knew every tiny detail of it.

Love touched them up every one with brushes dipped in brilliant dyes; her lips grew deeper in color and higher curved at the corners—her eyes deeper and bigger, her hair amazingly gold.

And then quite suddenly out from the black shoulders of her gown two wubbins of wings began to grow, and a halo began to glow and brighten around her head.

And when the man's head and eyes went clean back on him and his heart slid at last through his fingers and Love's purple sea closed over his head, his plain little, sweet little woman was simply made up of unearthly beautiful face, two blazing stars that were once plain twinkles in the eyes, a gilded head, a saint's ring around it, a monstrous pair of milk-white angel's wings and a rose at her breast. (The rose had stayed through all the stages of her change, for once she gave him that.) All the rest of her was lost in the glow from her face and wings. An angel straight down from the Moon!

And yet if you were to go and see that chap's sweetheart, you would sit and see just a colorless, sweet little woman, with an ample waist and sharp elbows, pale brown hair and a twinkle in her eyes. That's all.

THE WAR IN THE AIR

A Thrilling Story of the Invasion of This Country by a Hostile Sky Fleet. By H. G. Wells. Copyright by the Macmillan Company

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

Bert Smallways, an English Cockney kind, in assisting at a rescue of a man and woman from a balloon is caught in the basket and carried up alone, 10,000 feet into the clouds. He is ignorant of aeronautics. In rummaging about the basket he finds plans, blue prints, photos and letters which show that the man he aided in rescuing was Alfred Butteridge, the great air expert, who has invented the greatest airship known to history. It can sail the air and remain anchored in any spot in the heavens.

Bert remembers that Butteridge had offered his great secret to England for an enormous sum, and the offer was rejected. He finds letters that show that Butteridge was on his way to Germany, where the War Department there awaited him.

Bert, after days in the balloon, finds himself sailing over a great camp. Soldiers shout and bring down his balloon. It is the great military airship park of the Germans at Frankonia. He finds they are preparing to send a great fleet of 100 airships to attack the United States, so when they have declared war, and the expedition is in the hands of Prince Karl Albert, Lieutenant Kurt is told off to attend to the wants of Bert, in the belief that he is none other than Butteridge, the great air wizard.

When the fleet starts for America Bert is on board the flagship Vaterland, commanded by Prince Karl Albert. The Prince sends his secretary, the Professor von Winterfeld, to interview the supposed Butteridge about his flying machine.

THEN he put his elbows on the table, pinched his lower lip with his two forefingers and regarded Bert disconcertingly with magnified eyes.

"You come to us, Herr Pooterge, against your will," he said.

"Ow d'you make that out?" asked Bert after a pause of astonishment.

"I chuge by se maps in your car. They were all English. And your provisions—they were all picnic. Also your cords were entangled. You had been tugging, but no good. You could not manage se balloon, and anuzzer power than yours prought you to us. Is it not so?

Bert thought.

"Also—where is se lady?

"Ere, what lady?"

"You started with a lady. That is evident. You started for an afternoon excursion—a picnic. A man of your temperament, he would take a lady. She was not with you in your balloon when you came down at Dornhof. No! Only the chackets! It is your affair. Still I am curious."

Bert reflected. "'Ow d'you know that?"

"I chuge by se nature of your fardous provisions. I cannot account, Mr. Pooterge, for se lady, what you had done with her. Nor can I tell why you should wear such cheap pine clothes

"These are outside my instructions. Trifles, perhaps. Officially they are to be ignored. Ladies come and go. I am a man of se world. I haf known wife men wear sandals and eten practice vegetarian. I haf known men, or at any rate, I haf known chemists, who did not schmoke.

"You haf, no doubt, put se lady down somewhere. Well, let us get to business. A higher power"—his voice changed its emotional quality; his magnified eyes seemed to dilate—"has prought you and your aircraft straight to us. So"—he bowed his head—"so pe it."

"It Is Destiny"

"It is se destiny of Chermany and my prince. I can understaindt you always carry zat secret. You are afraid of rupers and spies. So it comes wis you to us, Mr Pooterge, Chermany will pay it."

"Will also!"

"She will," said the secretary, looking hard at Bert, a abandoned sandals in a corner of the locker. He folded himself computed a paper of notes for a moment and Bert eyed his brown and wrinkled face with expectation and terror.

"Chermany, I am instructed to say," said the secretary, with his eyes on the table and his notes spread out, "that always been willing to pay your secret. We haf indeed peen eager to acquire it decently, and it was only se fear that you might be on patriotic grounds, acting in collusion with your British War Office, zat has made us discreet in offering for your marvelous invention through intermediaries. We haf no hesitation whatever now, I am instructed, in agreeing to your proposal of a hundert tousand pounds."

"Crikey!" said Bert, overwhelmed.

"I peg your pardon?"

"Just a twinge," said Bert, raising his hand to his bandaged head.

"Ah! Also I am instructed to say that as for what noble, unrightly accused laty you haf championed so bravely against British hypocrisy and coldness, all se chivalry of Chermany is on her site."

"Lady?" said Bert faintly, and then recalled the great Butteridge love story. Had the old chap also read the letters? Is zat vhich him a scorcher if he had.

"Oh, that's aw right," he said, "about 'er. I 'adn't any doubts about that. I——"

He stopped. The secretary certainly had a most appalling stare. It seemed ages before he looked down again.

And the Title of Baron

"Well, se laty as you please. She is your affair. I haf perform my instructions. And as title of paron, sat also can pe done. It can all pe done, Herr Pooterge."

He drummed on the table for a second or so and resumed:

"I haf to tell you, zat you come to us at a crisis in—Welt-Politik. There can be no harm now for me to put our plans before you. Before you leafe this ship again they will be manifest to all se vorldt.

"War is perhaps already declared. We go—to America. Our fleet will descend out of se air upon se United States—it is a country quite unprepared for war afferywhere—everywhere. Zey have always relied on se Atlantic and their navy.

"We have selected a certain point—it at present se secret of our commanders which we shall seize and sen we shall establish a depot—a sort of inand Gibraltar. It will be—what will it be?—an ee's nest.

"Vere our airships will gaurge and repair, and thence they will fly to and fro over se United States, terrorising cities, dominating Washington, levying what is necessary until se terms we dictate are accepted. You follow me?"

"Go on," said Bert.

"We could haf done all zis wis such Luftschiffe and Drachendlieger as we possess but se secession of your machines renders our operations complete. It not only gifs us a better Drachendlieger, but it removes our last uneasiness as to Great Britain.

"Vithout you, sir, Great Britain, se land you lofed so well and sat has requited you so ill, sat land of Pharisees and reptiles, can do nozzing—nozzing!

"We Want Your Aid"

"You see, I am perfectly frank wis you. Well, I am instructed that Chermany recognises all this. We want you to place yourself at our disposal. We want you to become our chief head flight engineer. We want you to manufacture. We want to equip a swarm of hornets under your direction.

"And it is at our depot in America we want you. So we offer you—simply and without bargling—se full terms you demanded weeks ago—one hundert tousand pounds in cash, a salary of three tousand pounds a year, a pension of one tousand pounds a year, and se title of paron, as you desired. These are my instructions."

He resumed his scrutiny of Bert's face.

"There's all right, of course," said Bert, in his chair and produced a toothpick and used it to assist his meditation on Bert's case.

"What was that name?" he asked at last, putting away his toothpick. "I must write it down."

"Albert Peter Smallways," said Bert in a mild tone.

The secretary wrote it down after a little difficulty about the spelling because of the different names of the letters of the alphabet in the two languages.

A New Idea in Embroidery

AN ingenious girl has made herself a lingerie frock trimmed with oval disks in three sizes to form a border. These disks are of sheer pink linen on a white dimity gown.

They are pasted in position, stitched twice on the machine close on the edge to prevent fraying, and the material cut away underneath. The stitching is then covered by two rows of chain stitch, one in black, the other in pink.

The trimming is unusual and quickly applied; the only trouble is in shaping the disks. After a quarter of them were finished a friend suggested a method that simplified the work, and may prove a useful suggestion for all disk trimming.

A number of oval disks in the three sizes were cut by a tinner and put on the wrong side of the linen, which was traced around it, but cut about an eighth of an inch larger. A gathering string was run around the edge of the oval and drawn tight, holding the material, which was slightly dampened, firmly to the tinner. When dry the string was cut and the disks were shaped with the edges turned in ready to stitch. Instead of tin, heavy cardboard molds could be used.

Desperate Desmond

Desperate Desmond and his savage henchmen, Chief Gomgots of Borneo, are getting their just deserts this time. Claude has cast them adrift on a raft, bound hand and foot, so they cannot reach the food and water which are in plain sight. It will do those guys good to get a taste of their own medicine.

More trouble for the villain and his pal. Here comes a whale, and you know very well that a whale can't see a craft of any kind without wanting to capsize it. Imagine the fix those scoundrels will be in when the raft turns over. We hope that whaling ship doesn't interfere and spoil the fun.

The good leviathan of the mighty deep turned the trick all right. Now he'll just about devour those two black-hearted villains at a single gulp. It won't do his digestion a bit of good, but what do we care? All we want is to see Desmond get the worst of it. And that goes for Gomgots, too.

Now, isn't that just too annoying for anything? Those whalers had to go and shoot their harpoon at the very moment when the raft was turning over. They were shooting at the whale, but the harpoon hit the raft. Why couldn't they have waited till the whale devoured Desmond and Gomgots? That's what we'd like to know.

Oh, well that's the way it always goes. Just when we think we've got the villain dead to rights, all of a sudden we find we haven't. They've taken him aboard the whaling ship and he is explaining to the captain that he is an explorer, and that Gomgots is his good man Friday or something like that.

Isn't it a curious coincidence that Claude and Rosamond in their motor boat should happen along just at this time? Of all the ships on the ocean, they had to pick that one. By so doing they put themselves once more in the power of Desperate Desmond. To-morrow's pictures will tell what he does to them.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

CANNOT FORCE LOVE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a stenographer, nineteen years old, making good wages. Over two years ago I became acquainted with a very nice young man two years my senior.

We became very good friends, in fact, were secretly engaged when he angered me over trifling matters to such an extent that I broke off all relations. He has no bad habits, but was working on a small salary, in fact smaller than I was at that time, but being very progressive, we were content to wait a couple of years before marrying.

I have met all of his relatives and he all of mine, my mother thinking very much of him.

Since then he has gone to another State, has been promoted from time to time in his work and I know now, that he is doing very well indeed. He has written to me lately, but my last letter remains unanswered.

Now, Miss Fairfax, don't ask me to forget him, as I realize now how much I do and did care for him and that no one could take his place in my affections.

His last letter led me to believe his love for me was dead. He did love me, I know. No one could care more for a girl than he did.

I didn't realize how much I cared for him until I thought of some one else claiming him.

What would you advise? I expect him in the city soon. HOPETTE.

I AM afraid you will have to let things take their natural course. You see you quarrelled and broke with him over trifling matters. It is too bad that you did not realize that you loved him while you had him.

All you can do is treat him as nicely and as naturally as possible and if he loves no one else he may grow to care for you once more.

UNFAIR TREATMENT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man, twenty-five years of age, and have been keeping company with a young lady my age for about six months.

A short time ago I asked her to go to a dance and she refused to go, saying she couldn't dance. The evening before this dance was to take place she went to another dance, and also went to the same dances I asked her to go to, but she went alone. As I did not ask another young lady, I went alone.

At the dance she divided her time between two other young men, not giving me a chance to ask her for a dance.

A few days later she asked me to a social gathering at her home. I went, but there was another young man there who received all her attention.

I do not like to be used this way and would like an explanation of her actions before I go with her again.

Would you consider I have the right to expect such actions, and would you advise dropping her entirely?

A. B.

IF I were you I should transfer my attentions to some more appreciative girl. If you care for her enough to demand an explanation, do so; but otherwise let her go. You have no actual right to her time and interest unless you are engaged. She has treated you very shabbily in my opinion.

HOW I MADE MY LASHES GROW

By HULDA THOMAS

This is a subject I know you will all be interested in, and I am very much pleased to call attention to a remedy which has made me all that I am. I send there a picture of myself, the sun, but this treatment is a discovery recently made, and is possessed solely by me. It cannot be found anywhere else in the world.

I am a student of the beautiful. As far back as I can remember I have studied human faces to find out what makes some so much more beautiful than others. I noticed that eyes so and beautiful eyes were usually fringed by long, luxurious lashes, and were almost be perfect brown. Eyes having thin lashes and imperfect eyebrows never possessed attractive eyes. I became very much dissatisfied with my own poor lashes myself and finding nothing that would enhance the growth of lashes or eyebrows, I set to work to experiment myself. Being the wife of a physician and having some knowledge of chemistry, I hit upon a lotion which actually made my lashes much longer, but did not seem to thicken them. I then experimented further, and finally produced a safe remedy that caused an immediate growth of new hair but did not lengthen the old one to any extent. I came to the conclusion that neither a salve nor a lotion would produce the desired effect, and I therefore set to work to produce a wash that would, sure enough after applying the first during the day and the salve at night for six weeks, there was a wonderful improvement in both length and thickness, which changed the entire expression of my face, making me appear five so much younger and more beautiful. Every one who has since bought and used this compounding treatment has had the same result, absolutely harmless to eye itself or sight. Prices and literature sent FREE. The Engagement Ring

A JEWELER says that ninety-nine out of every one hundred engagement rings bought from him are diamond solitaires. These are plainly set in a narrow band of gold with raised effect, and only differ from one another in the size and purity of the stone.

Occasionally a man with sentiment or originality wants something different. Sometimes it will be the birthstone of his fiancee. Other men will have a mixed ring, the stone of each stone representing a letter of the name.

Square engagement rings are in favor just now. A solitaire diamond of this shape has small diamonds set in the sides of the ring it self.

Another engagement ring fancy among couples that like to defy superstition is a ring composed of opal set with thirteen diamonds. Colored stones are not especially popular for engagement rings, but if the fiancee has a fancy for a special stone, as an emerald, turquoise, ruby or opal, it is often chosen, sometimes alone, usually surrounded by diamonds.

Where an engagement ring must be remembered it is a pretty sentiment to choose a moonstone, which is supposed to bring good luck. These are pretty set in diamonds around a good oval stone.

The marking of an engagement ring varies with the sentiment of the lover. Usually it is nothing more than the initials of the girl connected by the word "to," and followed by the date.

The House With No Address

By E. A. Nesbit. Copyright, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

THERE are for all of us some moments that stand out forever, pure gold against the dull dust-color of life. For him the moment of all such moments was that in which he woke in the chatter of the sparrows in the gray of the London dawn and found her in his arms.

He would not move even to lay his lips to her face—lest he should awaken her; he sat still as sleep, while the light brightened and deepened in the strange room, repainting the colors of curtain and carpet that dawn had made ash-colored and at last washing away with a flood of pure light the last shadows in the corners.

"Sir," said the carriage clock cheerfully, as one who bears no malice. And she smiled and woke, and smiled again.

That they could not pass the day together was a grief that they shared, as they shared their breakfast—as they meant from now onward to share all things.

Planning the Future

He had promised his uncle to go round quite early. It was not an attractive prospect, but it had to be faced.

"You'll meet me for tea Denny at the Wood House, won't you? He must come up at once and get me that new bend modelled."

It was delightfully domestic—to be there alone with her, to have her pour the tea, and charge him with commissions. This was how it was always to be.

"I shall go down to the Wood House to-morrow—yes, I can get the chairwoman or some one to stay here if you really think I oughtn't to be alone. But you'll come and see me to-night. I'll arrange with Forrester."

"No," he said, "I can't do that. But I'll come to the Wood House to-morrow—no, not to-morrow—hang it, I can't—Sunday if I may. I'll come down on Sunday after noon."

She found his hat in the corner where he had thrown it, brushed him a little with a brush. He carried the tea-tray for her into the kitchen. Folded the table cloth and put it away.

It was to be always like this.

"Forrester comes at eight," she said. "Come and see the garden."

It was a queer dark garden, in whose black mould her great arms and forms and beautiful eyes were usually fringed by long, luxurious lashes, and were almost be perfect brown. Eyes having thin lashes and imperfect eyebrows never possessed attractive eyes. I became very much dissatisfied with my own poor lashes myself and finding nothing that would enhance the growth of lashes or eyebrows, I set to work to experiment myself. "But they soon die," she said. "We have to keep getting fresh ones. I expect there's a Lorenzo bend in each of the pots really, and that kills the flowers. They look just like it, don't they?"

In the passage under the lift she whistled through a speaking tube to Forrester above, giving him his orders.

"The lift's coming now," she said. "Good-bye. Good-bye. Till Sunday."

There was a respectfully resentful something in Forrester's manner as he adjusted the steel bars of the motor brougham, which forced Templar to say, quite without meaning to:

"Your mistress and I are engaged to be married." He found it comforting to add: "She wishes to see you as soon as possible, to arrange for some woman to come and sleep in the house to-night. It is not right that she should be alone here."

"No, sir," said Forrester, "It isn't."

CHAPTER XII.

Miss Steinhart Shops.

THE discomfort which Templar felt in the knowledge that his uncle knew of his engagement was considerably alleviated by the knowledge that his aunt didn't. To this protection he clung, never leaving all day, the safe anchorage of her ignorance. He craftily ignored all his uncle's ingeniously subtle plans for the securing of a tete-a-tete.

The deft dodging involved changed what might have been a severe duty into an enjoyable game of skill in which he came off the winner. When he saw them off on Waterloo on Saturday night he came near to pitying the uncle; so plainly had the itching of an executioner's curiosity written itself on the old man's features. But Templar was determined that until he could say of Sylvia, "she is my wife," he would say nothing.

The train was agonizing itself with shrieks and puffings that it really did mean to start presently; the guard was insinuating his green flag into positions where he would be free. It was only 6. He might get down to The Wood House to-night even. His mind strayed to half-digested extracts of the South Eastern time table.

The aunt recalled it.

"Oh, by the way," she said, "I promised Lady Jones you'd go there to dinner to-morrow."

"I can't," he said. "I'm engaged."

"Then you told me you were free."

"That was when I thought you would be here on Sunday," he said, with the effect of an effort. His mind strayed to half-loved him for.

"But she'll expect you. She'll be very much hurt. I promised you'd go."

"Better go," said the uncle, maliciously with baffled inquisitiveness. "You mustn't drop all your old friends. You'll make some nice people for your wife to know some day."

"I can't," said Templar again; "I'm awfully sorry."

Then we must," said the aunt, firmly. "Henry, stop the train. She'll never forgive me. She's a great pet. She asked us. We'll go and try to apologize for you—then I must say—Henry, take the umbrellas—Where's my bag!

"Don't, auntie," said Temple, resignedly. "I'll go." He looked anxiously at the flag, its waving imminent.

The thing was to get them started. If they did not go now they would stay till Monday—half a day—though—how he grudged it. Never mind: his was to spend his life with her.

"Good-by, auntie, dear," he said—and the guard really did, at last, do with his flag what he might just as well have done five minutes before. The train glided away. And Templar was left free indeed of uncle and aunt, but chained to Lady Jones's dinner party.

Sylvia, too, was chained. For Uncle Moses did not come that morning. Would perhaps come to-morrow. She snubbed Forrester's suggestion of a woman to sleep in the house. She was all right, she liked to be alone.

"Too, madam," said Forrester.

Denny came up at midday to see about the new wax head, ordered it at Clarkson's and lunched with Sandra. He had never known her so gay. While she was making the omelettes for lunch, which she did much better than Agar, he picked up a letter from a recessed sofa table, and read it. A black-edged letter. Then he understood her gaiety. After luncheon she practiced her dancing, and he played to her. It was the last rehearsal before Denny's ben-defit, at which his own music was to be played.

"I like this better than the theatre," he said in the pause after a dance, "this room—the looking glasses. Sandra, there are hundreds of you here—look, and hundreds of me. Do you like that?"

"Why?" she idly asked from the green carpet where she rested.

"It's silly," he said, "but I know that one of you—the one farthest away of all—the one we can just see—is perfectly contented because she is with me."

"Which one of you?" she asked and smiled at him.

"This one," he said quietly, and struck himself on the breast. "This one—the one that loves you best, Sandra—best of them all. Though they all love you, of course," he added in a vague, troubled note—"all of them, even the farthest—the one that we just can't see."

"Dear Denny," she said, and "Dear Denny," again. Then she jumped up.

"Play something pretty," she said "something of your own, something very beautiful indeed. I want to invent a new dance a happy love-dance. I've never tried that."

Music for New Dance

"No—you've never tried that," he said, and lifted the fiddle to his chin.

The plain, white folds of the dress in which she always practiced her dancing lent themselves to the innocent, joyous beauty of the gestures she sketched while he attuned the strings, but as soon as he drew the bow across them in a wild, sweet, entreating air, her gestures changed, drooped and saddened.

"That won't do," she said. "It's beautiful, but it's too sad. That's hopeless love, Denny. I want love that's happy—the kind of love that turns everything rainbow-colored."

He swept his hand hastily across the strings. "Yes," he said, "I know." And played again.

"Ah, that's better," she said, as the strong full notes quivered richer and stronger.

"Still I don't know this music," she said, "I want to practise the dance of worship."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them with a Veil; Remove Them with the New Drug.

An eminent skin specialist recently discovered a new, colorless preparation, which has proved remarkably successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co. on a money back guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil, get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first night's use will show a wonderful improvement, and the light freckles vanish entirely. This is absolutely harmless, and cannot injure the most tender skin.

Be sure to ask Druggists A. Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co. for double strength othine, as this is what is sold on the money-back guarantee.

PLAN OUTING OF AUTO MEN

By J. C. KERRISON.

Plans for the 17th of June outing of the Bay State Automobile Association are progressing rapidly and it looks as though the members and their friends will spend two days of next month in the same delightful way.

The distance of the run hasn't been determined, Chairman Stevens of the touring committee having several places in mind which he will visit with President E. A. Gilmore.

The committee plans to make the outing one of the most enjoyable in the history of the organization and will see arrange matters that members and friends can attend without undue fatigue to hundred miles or more.

It is possible that Falmouth will be selected for the night-stopping point, although plans for a gigantic clambake in a New Orleans grove on the Cape are being seriously considered.

Bobby Burns, who ran the most disqualified Oldfield record, is to be seen in Bend Beach, where he proposes to make an onslaught upon the world's records for the mile and kilometer. In unofficial trials he has broken the world's record for the distances, and as soon as the weather and course conditions are proper he will make an official attempt for the records. Burns is experimenting with a special contrivance to protect his engine against wind-resistance and flying sands.

Word has been received from the three-wheeled motorette that started out some time ago to make the trip for New Francisco by way of the South. Ward Sherwood writes from Atlanta, Ga., that eight miles from Atlanta that the bonfires fizzled have given good roads after days of hard plugging through mud, with rain or snow to make it worse.

"We have just passed the 1,000 mile mark," he writes, "and really feel as though we were well started on the 3,000 mile trip. The thousand miles has been harder, I think, on the car than a whole year's driving under ordinary conditions. The car has been rocked through streams over a foot deep, and at least five inches for over a hundred miles, water at forty miles per hour. The car has been out of sight, and over the rims of our wheels, have stood for days at a stretch, the frozen clay roads as rough or rougher than railroad ties, and every other kind of road a motorist could ever meet."

BERKSHIRE'S BEST TROUT BROOK SOLD

LENOX, April 14—Angie Armstrong, widow of George E. Armstrong, wealthy Boston banker, who died three years ago, has sold her estate in Becket for $40,000 to Francis C. Leland, president of the New York County National Bank. The estate of 614 acres and the finest trout brook in Berkshire.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Smaller earnings are being viewed without alarm, because there is this official assurance that increases in the cost of freight rates will be permitted before earnings reach a dangerously low point.

$ $ $

The reason for believing in the stability of the bond market is the expressed intention of the Interstate Commerce Commission to allow railroads to earn a reasonable interest on their investments. That assurance, coupled with the world's untold millions to investment, for it insures an income on their money.

$ $ $

The Bethlehem Steel Company announced that it had abandoned temporarily its plan for refunding short term notes, because the bond market is considered by the directors to be not now promising. This announcement did not agree with opinions expressed among financiers that the bond market is going steadily upward, regardless of what may happen to the stock market.

$ $ $

In the face of the world-wide holiday, with the Supreme Court decisions on tobacco and Standard Oil pending, and Federal Judge Dodge's decision on the possibilities for Monday, the stubborn resistance of the stock market is a most remarkable feature. Nobody in the whole financial world seems willing to sell stocks, although many have taken a fixed market position on the Supreme Court decisions, tariff reform and crops. The Japanese war is forgotten.

$ $ $

It does not make a dollar's difference to the man in the street in the New York subway extensions are constructed by the McAdoo Tunnel Company, the Interborough Rapid Transit or the Brooklyn Rapid Transit. These are simply three names under which J. P. Morgan, Thomas F. Ryan and a few other able financiers are operating. First Morgan offered to let McAdoo do it that proposal being rejected, Mr. Shonts stepped forward, and now owns Winburn, the Brooklyn Rapid Transit. It is almost too funny to be true, but it is true, that the only way the investor can be sure of picking the right stock is to let all of them alone. A speculator should buy all of them in equal volume.

$ $ $

Missouri Pacific is being watched very carefully by a few traders who are familiar with the inside workings of the stock system. If President Bush of the Western Maryland, is advanced to the presidency of Missouri Pacific heavy selling of Missouri Pacific is expected, both for long and short accounts. The fact that so many first-class railroad presidents have refused to accept the presidency of the Missouri Pacific has cast a stigma on the job, and any one taking it now will be considered a second rate man, whether he is or not. Mr. Bush is understood to be a firm believer in Gould policies, and his selection would be taken to mean that the bonds are really in control of Missouri Pacific. Proof of anything like that would drive the public out of Missouri Pacific immediately. Even with a new president taking public confidence, Missouri Pacific stock ought to decline materially, because there must be at least $150,000,000 of bonds issued to finance the system properly. The issue of such a large volume of securities ahead of the stock does not explain any promise of very much higher prices in the near future. With proper management, Missouri Pacific should in ten years be earning as much per mile as Union Pacific.

Estimates of the New York currency movements of the week, made up yesterday on account of the Stock Exchange holiday today, indicated a gain of something over $3,500,000 in the cash holdings of the banks. Some of the larger institutions, however, are known to have suffered a small loss in cash, taking yesterday's transactions into account, and it was thought therefore that possibly the actual figures would not fully bear out the estimated gain. At the moment, however, the cash movements are having relatively little bearing on the matter of interest rates, owing to the superabundance of funds at that centre. This has for some time been clearly enough indicated in the low rates at which loans for all periods have been available. Call money was a little firmer yesterday than the day before, but time loans showed no change.

President McGibbon of the La Rose Mining Co. states that after payment of dividends on April 20, the La Rose Co. will have a cash surplus of over $1,100,000, and that its assets would have been a few hundred thousand dollars more, if the company's operations had not been curtailed during the past two months through lack of power. The power difficulty, however, has been settled, and the company is now getting all the power it requires.

Members of the Cobalt syndicate which controls the Butte Central are now making a visit to the Hub. The shaft has reached a depth of 250 feet and is expected to be down to the 1,000-foot level in the early Summer.

THROUGH RATES ON 250 LINES SUSPENDED

WASHINGTON, April 14—The Interstate Commerce Commission to-day suspended through rates on 250 railroads in the southwestern territory with top line connections until June 1, pending an inquiry as to their reasonableness.

Permission was granted by the commission to twenty-five railroads involved in the recent case brought by the New York Produce Exchange affecting lake grain rates, the privilege of establishing before May 1, upon three days' notice, rates on lake grain for export from Buffalo and other lake points to New York.

PAGE INTRODUCES COLD STORAGE BILL

WASHINGTON, April 14—A bill to regulate traffic in cold storage food products, introduced by Representative Littlepage of West Virginia, would brand as adulterated foods the following: Beef and beef products after seven months in cold storage, veal four months, pork four months, sheep four months, lambs, butter, poultry, game, fish and butterine three months. The bill provides that any article once in storage and returned after notice shall be regarded as adulterated and that no frozen article of food shall be offered for sale except as frozen.

GIRLS DANCE AT GYM MEET

The closing exercises of the convention of the American Physical Education Association took place in the Roxbury Municipal Gymnasium last night with a gymnastic exhibition witnessed by 2,000.

Miss Greenwood led the students of the Posse Gymnasium through an aesthetic dancing wand. J. Leonard Mason and Miss Grath, instructors at the Brookline Gymnasium, led the women's class through free exercises and couple dancing and the work of the women was thoroughly appreciated.

Folk dancing by the girls of the Posse Gym, with Miss Torrey as instructor, was well done, and then the seniors of the Sargent School, with Mr. Schrader as instructor, went through rhythmic exercises preparing to Intrigue. Class fencing by the Posse Gymnasium girls, with Mr. Green leading, held the attention of the audience until the close.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, APRIL 14, 1911

An Opportunity for the District Attorney and the Grand Jury.

District Attorney Pelletier is now investigating with great thoroughness the conduct of Herrick, Welch and Shaw in filing that strange Shaw inventory.

It is possible for much good to come of such an investigation, besides the indictment of these men. Whether it shall ultimately appear that they are guilty of a crime or whether, as usual with that class of men, they escape on technicalities, no one denies THEIR MORAL GUILT and the harm that the same sort of proceeding will do, if it continues.

If, by any unfortunate curves in the law, the course of justice is diverted in this case, it would be well for the District Attorney to inquire into the whole situation thoroughly and to make a report to the public. One of the ancient and most cherished functions of the Grand Jury was the holding of a GRAND INQUEST. This was an inquiry upon a large scale into everything which related to the subject under investigation, not only for the purpose of punishing the offenders, but to make a public recommendation concerning the way to meet the same evil in the future.

The Grand Jury in its original inception and in the fullness of all its functions is not a body merely to listen to just so much evidence as the prosecuting officer places before it, returning an indictment or refusing to return one, according to its members' view of the evidence as presented. The Grand Jury can and very often ought to make a WIDE AND GENERAL INQUIRY into a situation which has become harmful to the public interest.

Mr. Pelletier has given himself a good example in his recommendation concerning the sale of firearms.

Guided by the advice of District Attorney Pelletier, they can investigate this whole tax-dodging system from the beginning to the end of the chapter. With a power to summon witnesses and to make them answer questions under oath, and to compel the production of documents and papers, the Grand Jury might be able to obtain more information concerning this whole question than ANY OTHER PUBLIC BODY in the county. The recommendation of the District Attorney, based upon information thus obtained and supported by the opinion of the Grand Jury, would have great weight in considering the proper solution of a very serious question.

The Governor this week has sent to the Legislature a message urging that it be expeditious in obtaining from the Supreme Court an opinion concerning the constitutional limitations of the Commonwealth with respect to dealing with these taxation problems.

The Tax Commissioner says that a BILLION DOLLARS is ESCAPING TAXATION in Massachusetts. Perhaps a grand inquest by the Grand Jury of Suffolk County will give even more accurate information than Commissioner Trefry has at his command.

In levying taxation, the government should not raise more taxes than it needs, and if it should obtain more accurate information concerning the vast amount of personal property which remains untaxed in this Commonwealth, it might be quite possible so to reduce the tax rate that those who are now escaping from their just share of the burdens of government might find that, after all, honesty is the best policy and that when everybody pays his taxes everybody may pay less and yet can retain his self-respect.

Anything that Mr. Pelletier and his Grand Jury can recommend from information that a grand inquest would obtain which will help the people to compel an equalization of the tax burdens and make it as difficult for a man who owns a million in stocks and bonds to hide it as for a man to hide the house that shelters his family will be gratefully received by the public. The time is drawing to a close when people will tolerate the spectacle which is presented in the Back Bay, when on the 29th of March a horde of selfish citizens take flight over night to some town where they BARGAIN WITH THE ASSESSORS to tax them on an insignificant part of their property.

These creatures live in Boston most of the year and enjoy her water and her sewer service, her public streets, her light, her police department and her fire department, her library, her churches, which the public does not tax, and all those improvements which distinguish our civilization from the crude methods of the past and which cost the people of Boston money that the small householder has to pay in taxes, that the man who pays rent has to pay for his landlord, and the man who buys groceries has to pay for his grocerman.

Those who are best able to bear their share of the cost of all these privileges are the ONLY ONES WHO ESCAPE and unload their burdens upon the rest. If the District Attorney and the Grand Jury can help to correct this unjustice, by suggesting any remedy, it is certain that the people will be pleased.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

OPPOSES THE ZOO

Editor AMERICAN:

I understand the city of Boston is proposing to establish a "zoo" within its boundaries, on the ground that such an institution is an educational one and conducive not only to the entertainment, but also to the mental and moral welfare of the people.

Against this notion permit me to utter a few words of emphatic denial. The zoo is not an educational institution, unless the sight of horrid examples be considered a legitimate method of education. Animals out of their natural habitat, suffering from want of air, exercise and freedom, depressed by imprisonment and a deprivation of their natural enjoyments, do not supply a form of education suitable for intelligent people to adopt, or conducing to the welfare of the youthful mind.

The zoo is a relic of the brutal past, which delighted in the exploitation of the weaker and captive races, both human and sub-human. It is a device to cater to an idle, egotistic and heartless curiosity which is stimulated at the sight of wild living creatures in the power of men. It panders to stunt the moral sense and dull that feeling of regard for the rights of our fellow-creatures which is the only real sign of a dawning civilization. It is a source of untold cruelty to the animals themselves. It is a direct infraction of the Golden Rule. Its motive is childish and its "educational" results a fiasco. It does no good whatever, but a deal of harm, and has no place in a progressive community.

The people should protest against the expenditure of their money for such a purpose.

J. M. GREENE.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP

Editor AMERICAN:

Government ownership seems to be a moot question. The railroad people are gradually bringing it about, however, in that they are not public-spirited enough to "see the light," that makes for a better understanding, as between public and quasi-public corporations. The result is that the people are beseeching more and more for legislation that shall bring about the remedy desired.

Which, of course, means step by step, public ownership or control by the government.

No Mystery Is Too Baffling for Him

Springtime Memories

By PERCY SHAW

WHEN the boys are shooting marbles
And the girls are rolling hoops;
When the smiling organ-grinder
Bows before the crowded stoops,
Then there's something queer that strikes you
And you feel the chains you wear
Snap and leave you in the Springtime
Of the land of "Time to Spare."

Then the city fades before you,
And you roam upon the sly
Where the brook hides in the shadow
Where the speckled beauties lie;
Then you see your rod a-bending
While your victim swirls and swings,
And you build a baby bonfire
To enjoy the feast of kings.

Then the roar of train and traffic
Lapses to the singing cheer
Of a thousand birds of passage
On the waking of the year.
And you see yourself bareleggèd
With a pussy willow wand,
All unconscious of the glory
Stalking silent at your hand.

Then the voice of crowds goes dimming
And instead you hear her say:
"Oh, I seen you kissin' Jessie,
"An' I hate you, anyway,"
And you slink along and wonder
What it is makes girls so queer,
And you fight the next chap handy
Just to clear the atmosphere.

Then the city's million street lamps
Merge into a single glow
From a narrow farmhouse window
In the happy long ago,
And you feel you steps go halting
As the future looms before,
With its siren music calling
To the conquests on its shore.

When the boys are playing hopscotch
And the girls are skipping rope,
When the smiling organ-grinder
Sings the fated hero's hope,
Then there's something queer that chokes you,
Something strange that's in the air—
It's the thought of wasted Springtimes
In the day of "Time to Spare."

This Woman Cleaned a City; Why Can't She Vote?

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THE old-fashioned man looks at life through a little peep hole, and can conceive of nothing that lies beyond the range of his vision.

If a man's buttons are on; if his slippers are in place at night; if his meals are on time and well cooked, he argues his wife is giving to the world all she owes it. He pats himself with a grunt of satisfaction. His wife, he says, knows what is woman's place and, in his little peephole at life, that place is to minister to the comfort of the man the good Lord gave her.

Husbands may come from another locality; but this is not in the reasoning of the old-fashioned man.

Invoking Woman's Aid

The man who refuses to let his vision be bound by a peep hole knows there are things outside the four walls of a house that woman can do; he realizes that there are tasks no one can do better, and it has happened to such a man of wide vision that he has called for a woman's help, in the public affairs of life, as frantically and appealingly as any man ever called for his wife when he got his shirt half over his head and found buttons and pins prevented him from getting it any further.

That is the kind of a man Atlanta has for a Mayor. The city was indescribably dirty and the Mayor tried to get funds to have it cleaned, and failed.

In such a dilemma, the eyes are not alone offended by the piles of refuse in streets and alleys; the nostrils find offence, and this means sickness, pestilence, death.

The Mayor of Atlanta, having failed to get funds to have the work done, turned for help to a source that has never failed man, in any honorable appeal, since the world began—woman. He went to Mrs. W. Woods White, president of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, and told his story.

Under her directions, a coupon appeared in the newspapers signifying a promise on the part of the signer to clean her (Mark that pronoun!) own premises on a certain date. These coupons were sent to a committee and the ward having the greatest number of responses received a reward of $25.

The plan worked, and Atlanta received a cleaning-up such as it had never known before; and "cleaning-up" day has now become an institution in Atlanta, as faithfully observed as sweeping day in a well-kept home.

The New Power

There was no delay; no graft or attempt to make political asset or glory. It will not go down in campaign history that Atlanta was cleaned, and kept clean, by the Republican, the Democratic or Independent party. The honor is due to a power greater than party, to Woman.

The power behind the scrubbing brush and broom cannot be confined within four walls; and he is old-fashioned who thinks it.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About His Pa's Fight

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA put on his hat last nite & sed to Ma, Wife, I am going out for to talk a little airoil. The air in the house is very oppressive. Why doant you talk me with you? sed Ma. Beekaus I doant like to leeve little Bobbie alone, Pa sed. Crime is run-pant in this grate city of ours, Pa sed, & I wuddent dare to leeve him heer. He mite be kid-napped.

"Well, sed Ma, I doant think that anybody knowing yure finanshul condishun wud bother kid-napping anybody connekted with you, but if you are afrade we can take Bobbie along with us.

Why go at all, sed Pa. You are in yure kimono & it wud taik you a hour to dress. Now sed Pa, if you are going to pout about it, I mite as well tell you why I am going down town. I am going to git a feller.

What? sed Ma, & bring him to the house? Another im-pombei party, I supposs. This thing has got to stop.

You doant understand me, Pa sed, this party I am going to git I am going to git good, with both feets. Having had the good fortune to receeve a loering educashun, wile I was young, & having inherited sum of my father's inhuman strength, I feel tonite as though I cud git twenty guys instead of one.

You are not going a inch, sed Ma. I will not have yure husband mixed up in a vulgar brawl. You are going to stay rite heer at home & work, or read the paiper, or do sumthing. You certingly will nevver leeve this house with my permishun. I am very sorry to say it, sed Pa, kind of tender, but if I cant leeve the house with yure permishun I shall have to leeve it without yure permishun. I simply have to git this guy.

Then Pa went.

Bobbie, Ma sed, after Pa had went, I hoap that wen you grow up you will not beecum a arrogant bully, a swashbuckler, a brawler like yure father. It is a bad sistem, sed Ma, one that is liable to get you into no end of trubbel beefore you die.

I tould Ma that wen I grew up I wud nevver fite unless sumbody kicked me hard in the shins or pulled my noase first, & she sed Bobbie, you are a good boy. I think that you have sum of my gentel traits.

Just then Pa cam back. He had a bloody noase & his eer was as big as a base-ball & his eye was as black as a cloud in April. I maid up that stuffen myself.

Ahem, sed Ma, I infer that you got yure guy. With both fists, too, sed Ma. You must have put yure ahimsa strength in hok on the way down, sed Ma. It seems to me, Ma sed that you doant win many arguments. What a face, sed Ma, & what a pity. What a pity that one so young & fair shud be marked up like that. You ought to see him, sed Pa. He looks fierce.

I guess he does, sed Ma, he certainly acted fierce. Sum of these days, Ma sed, wen you go out looking for it, you will git it so good that the rest will be singing above you. I had a nukel cost, Ma sed, that thought he cud fite. He has went away forever.

Then Pa got sum medicin & fixed Pa the best she cud. She cuddent fix him up so much beekaus the man that Pa had went out to git, that man had fixed Pa pritty good himself.
